THE FLASHLIGHT

Volume 59, Issue 14

Mansfield University, Mansfield, PA

January 26, 1984

Strategic Planning

by Michael Nolle

The first draft of the Strategic Planning Report will be released to the faculty, students, and all other Mansfield University personnel by the end of this week.

This report, which was designed by a special committee consisting of six senior faculty members and the Provost, is intended to alter the direction of Mansfield University in both the short and long run.

In an interview with the FLASHLIGHT, Dr. Paskvan and Dr. Mullen, co-chairmen of the Strategic Planning Committee, declined to reveal any specifics regarding the report. However, they did outline certain areas which were investigated and discussed by the committee.

The report addresses almost every aspect of life at Mansfield University including the role of the surrounding community. The following are possible ramifications of the report:

It examines the funding and overall future of the inter-collegiate sports program...Considers both the expansion and reduction of certain academic programs...Considers realignment of professors from weak academic programs to more successful ones...Suggests that certain faculty positions be eliminated after they are vacated due to retirement...Makes recommendations regarding the combination of certain administrative functions into one office...Discusses the possible increase of the student health fee as well as the implementation of a computer usage fee.

Both Dr. Mullen and Dr. Paskvan stressed that the report which will be released this week is only a draft. Any individual group of students, faculty, or other MU personnel is invited to make recommendations for the report. These recommendations should be in writing and submitted to Dr. Paskvan (in South Hall) by February 9.

A revised version of the report will then be forwarded to President Kelchner by the middle of February. At that time the committee will be dissolved, and President Kelchner will be free to implement the suggested policies.

President Kelchner established this committee shortly after becoming Interim President last July. He felt it was necessary to seriously consider what the state of the University will be by the end of the decade. President Kelchner wanted to examine the role MU should play in the community, the Twin Tiers, and the commonwealth.

The committee was formed after the faculty assembly and the faculty union submitted a list of potential candidates. The faculty members whose names appeared on both lists were then likely candidates. The Provost and Kelchner took over the selection process from there.

Mansfield received a Title III grant from the Department of Education. This planning grant not only funds the strategic planning study, but also pays for the services of a special strategic planning consultant, George Keller.

Mr. Keller was previously hired by the state system of education for his expertise in the area of strategic planning. Keller, who contributed to the report, is employed for the Barton-Gillette firm in Baltimore.

Dr. Paskvan said this report does not specifically address dollars and cents, and he does not classify it as a budget report, but said it does take the university's monetary resources into consideration in order to make reasonable recommendations.

The Strategic Planning Report was not designed to eliminate a certain number of positions in order to realign the budget. There are no calls for any specific retrenchment for faculty, administration, or maintenance personnel.

Other areas which are covered in the first draft of the report include: the investigation of a nursing degree program at Robert Packer Hospital; the consideration of creating a rural studies institute, which would employ external advisors from the community; recommendations in the area of physical planning, student services, and financial aid; examination of the possibility of creating specialized degree programs in the business department, and the realignment of certain business faculty positions; intensifying MU as a cultural center since MAC's new president.

CUB's New Name

by Ann Marie Defina

Starting this semester, the Mansfield Activities Council (MAC) will be undergoing several changes.

President Connie Jo Terry says that one of the first changes is to make the campus aware that MAC is the same organization as last year's CUB and that MAC serves the same purposes.

"Many people don't realize that MAC is still CUB with a new name," said Terry.

MAC will also have a new constitution. The organization will be set up as the Student Government Association which is similar to a corporation.

MAC will have various committees each having its own chairperson, secretary, treasurer, and public relations person.

These committees will be governed by an executive board of President, Vice-President, Executive Secretary and Executive Treasurer.

The Movie Committee will continue to show campus-chosen movies on Saturday and Sunday nights in Allen Hall.

The Feature Arts and Forum Committee is responsible for sponsoring guest speakers, plays and small scale shows such as the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band last semester.

The Concert Committee is currently arranging a spring concert presenting either a musician or comedian.

The Coffeehouse Committee

scouts up local and campus talent to present.

The Public Relations Committee does all the advertising for all events sponsored by MAC. They feel this is a good way for PR majors to start their experiences.

A Cultural Affairs Representative has input on all the committees. One member of SGA acts as a liaison between SGA and MAC to keep each organization informed about the other.

Another new idea for this semester is "MAC—The Gator." He is an alligator to be a mascot for the entire school, not just for MAC, which is purchasing him. "MAC" will attend home campus events such as basketball games and movies.

The ideas for the new constitution and MAC the Gator were proposed jointly by MAC's advisor Clarence Crisp and last semester's President Mike Nolle.

The current president Connie Terry stresses that "we want new members. We can't do everything ourselves. MAC is for every person on this campus. We work to serve you."

Terry stated that attending one MAC Meeting held Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. in room 204 Memorial Hall is the only requirement for becoming a member.

She also stated that anyone who wants to become a voting member must have attended 12 meetings or worked at 12 events in the fall or must attend 5 meetings or 5 events in the spring.

Terry emphasizes the experiences gained from working with MAC. "You learn so much," she said.

"You work with musicians, learn about various productions, set up for concerts, learn management, and meet many exciting people," she added.

MAC's previous concert manager, Mark Fernandez, who graduated with a degree in theater, is currently touring as a lighting technician with Constellation II, who performed a laser rock show here last semester.

Among the upcoming MAC events are a talent show, a bus trip, a coffeehouse and a pool tournament.

Terry stated that anyone interested in joining MAC can attend the weekly meetings or visit her during her office hours which are Monday-Wednesday 11-12:15 p.m.; Tuesday 8:30p-7:30 p.m.; and Thursdays 2-3 p.m.

Guideline

by Linda Gillie

"Many students don't realize that we are right here on campus," declares Mary Soderberg of Guideline. A telephone referral service open to the entire community, Guideline has moved its office to 104 South Hall. Guideline is open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

All calls are confidential, and most are referred to contact agencies, clinics, and services which then offer direct help.

Guideline originated in October of 1981 through the direction of Larry Miller, Department Chairperson of Social Work. Miller, currently on sabbatical in Egypt, applied for a one-year grant from the Commission on Crime and Delinquency to establish a rural referral and information center on the Mansfield University campus. Guideline is now funded from local sources, such as Mansfield United Way; County Commissioners of Tioga, Bradford, and Potter Counties; Area Agency on Aging; Drug and Alcohol Program; and Mental Health, Mental Retardation Program.

Recently, guideline received a grant from the Developmental Disabilities Council which has allowed a full-time employee, Linda Plumely, to set up a referral system for housing for the handicapped.

Soderberg, who received her degree in Rural Sociology from the University of Wisconsin, urged, "Anyone interested in volunteering at Guideline can stop by or give us a call. Also, intern projects in computer, public relations, or social work are available, and students in these projects are encouraged to contact our office."

Sherry Frisch, a social work major at MU and a telephone volunteer at Guideline commented, "Working at Guideline is always a learning experience."

Guideline's telephone numbers are 662-4466 on campus, and toll-free 1-800-332-6718.

this could favorably affect admissions as well as offering more enriching programs for the surrounding communities.

Dr. Paskvan and Dr. Mullen repeatedly mentioned that this draft is subject to change. According to Mullen, the original document may not even resemble the final one, which will be submitted to Kelchner. The possible changes would be elicited from recommendations from anyone either attending or employed at MU.

WNTE

Mansfield University's campus radio station, WNTE, has a "new and improved" sound this semester due to a newly remodeled studio.

The major component of this studio is the new console. The console is a United Recording Electronics Industries (UREI) 1683. The entire control board basically consists of the console, two SP-25 Technics turntables, an audio processor and a cartridge tape machine.

Keith Smeal, WNTE General Manager, boasts that the sound quality produced by the new control board is "1,000 percent" better than before. Smeal also stated that their sound quality is comparable to other top stations in the area.

The previous control board was bought during the early history of the station.

Reporter Joins Staff

by Tim Cox

Paul Brooks was added to the English Department faculty.

Brooks, who resides in Corning, NY, is currently an instructor of journalism and English in the department. He is teaching 090 English, 313 Composition, and Media Design this semester. He also expects to teach the Introduction to Journalism course to be offered in the Fall.

Brooks was previously employed at the Star Gazette where he worked as a reporter out of the Corning Office which serves 100,000 people. He also worked at the Corning Leader.

He left his job at the Star Gazette because he felt the hours were undesirable. "I wanted more time to see my family and to do other creative writing."

Brooks received a Master's Degree in Journalism from the University of Mississippi in 1976. He has had teaching experience in Corning, and he spent two years in Korea teaching English as a second language.

Brooks will take over the position of the Flashlight Advisor in the Fall while Dr. Uffelman is on sabbatical. He also stated that he is interested in the Faculty Union and the Faculty Senate.

Where's the Beef?

by Michael Nolle

It's finally here. Yes, it is what everyone has been eagerly anticipating for weeks. No, I'm not talking about the new special one-hour Lawrence Welk polka video, which will soon be seen on MTV. I'm talking about the FLASHLIGHT. But why are people so anxious to read it? There is only one sane explanation, and that is to find out what is edible at Manser.

Were you as confused as I was for the past ten days? Just what kind of MYSTERY meat were they serving? Without the FLASHLIGHT to offer warning, the uninformed gourmand must trudge up to Manser at his or her own risk. It's comparable to playing Russian roulette, only more dangerous.

In case you have not surmised by now, your lovable (but misunderstood) Fine Arts editor decided to return to Mansfield once again. I also decided to continue last semester's humor column on a bi-monthly basis. I do this in honor of the "Super Bowl." One good JOKE deserves another.

I'm so glad to be back at MU. It's the only place where a person can start a conversation by stating, "Hey, I hear it was -21 degrees last night." It's one of the best pick-up lines of the year. All real men talk about the cold. In fact, I was just telling this gorgeous co-ed that it was so cold in my room the other night that even my extra fuzzy feet pajamas, (the pair with the color portrait of John Glenn), didn't even keep me warm. I think she was really turned on.

I hope everyone had an exciting break. I had a great time working several part-time jobs. My biggest thrill occurred in the political arena. I was fortunate to work with the "Committee to Elect Andy Rooney In '84." I think our country needs a man who is willing to search for the answers to our concerns and problems. I can just picture Andy at a press conference: "Did you ever notice that Ed McMahon gives away an awfully big amount of money? Where does he get all that money? Does he really go to people's houses? Even if they live in New Jersey? Why does he always laugh at Carson's old jokes? Isn't he sick of them?....."

In addition to working in politics, I also entered the wacky field of show business. NBC asked me to host their new morning game show. It's called "The Price is Right/Let's Make A Deal/Family Feud/Card Shark's Hour." Unfortunately, I had to quit because I couldn't remember the damn rules.

But now we are back again, and everything is already underway. And don't let anyone try to tell you that nothing exciting ever happens at Mansfield. That is simply a myth which has no merit. For example, Cedarcrest dorm council has scheduled their annual "Gary Coleman Film Festival" for early March. Tickets are only $45, and are now on sale.

I've also heard this wild rumor about Mansfield getting a major recording star. According to my sources, MAC has an outside chance at getting Leonard Nimoy in concert. As any music lover knows, Nimoy has been touring the nation performing old protest songs which were previously recorded by such artists as Bob Dylan, the Rolling Stones, the Who, and the Archies. It sounds great, but we may have to settle for the Partridge Family.

A smart student will take advantage of all the great activities at Mansfield. I offer this advice because last semester I almost had a nervous breakdown after I decided to skip the Biology Club's "Dissect A Small Rodent Contest." In fact, I was pretty depressed all of last semester. It all started when I enrolled in that special night class. It was GAY 101--How To Dress Like Boy George. Of course, I was the best-dressed guy at Lando's.

Anyway, this semester is going to be different. And to insure that, I've constructed a list of five dictums to live by while at MU.

1. I will never do a ten-minute speech on the following topic: 44 Reasons Why the Washington Redskins Are the Best Team in Pro Football.

2. On a date, I will never tell my date that she has big, fluffy buns, and yell "WHERE'S THE BEEF?" at the waiter.

3. When attending a MU basketball game, I will never point a .357 Magnum at a referee and shout, "Go ahead, Bozo, make my day!"

4. I will place my academic work before everything else. The following activities are the only exceptions: parties, watching TV and movies, concert choir ensemble, power lifting contests, water polo, pretzel eating competitions, and visiting local farms and dairies.

5. I will never marry a girl named Bertha unless she was once a professional jello wrestler.

Musical Notes

by Bob Bogart

The British Invasion of the '80's continues this week with the English quintet Yes moving into the top spot on the singles chart with "Owner of a Lonely Heart." They knock the duo of Paul McCartney and Michael Jackson out of the number one position that "Say Say Say" had held down for the past six weeks. "Owner of a Lonely Heart" is Yes' biggest single in their history, surpassing their last and highest chart single, "Roundabout," which peaked at number 13, twelve years ago.

In a similar vein, the British trio Genesis moves their single "That's All" up five notches to number 12 this week, making it their biggest hit in America so far. "That's All" surpasses "Misunderstanding," which peaked at number 14 in the USA back in 1980.

More foreign acts are making musical news this week. Australia's Olivia Newton-John's "Twist of Fire" slips two places to number 7 this week, but not before putting Livvy in the record books as the female artist with the most consecutive years having at least one top 5 hit. Olivia now has racked up a top five single in each of the last 6 years, breaking a three-way tie she was in with Donna Summer and Barbara Streisand.

The German group Nena is knocking on the top Thirty's door at number 33 this week with "99 Luftballons" (translation: "99 Balloons"). This is only the fourth song to be sung entirely in German to make the top forty on the American charts. The others are, in chronological order, Ivo Robic's "Morgen," which peaked at number 13 in 1959; "Sailor (Your Home is the Sea)" by Lolita which reached number 5 in 1960, and the German duo Kraftwerk which took "Autobahn" to number 18 back in 1975.

Over on the album chart, Michael Jackson's "Thriller" is in the top spot for the 25th week and is spending its 55th week in the top ten on the LP chart. Jackson, who took eight separate honors in last week's American Music Awards presentation, has now logged more weeks in the top ten on the album chart since 1968 when the soundtrack to "The Sound of Music" spent its 109th week in the top ten.

And finally, for those who enjoy the trivial aspects of music,

Here's The Chicken

I hear the basketball game against Cheyney was a great success. Never mind that we lost.

Unfortunately, I couldn't attend the game because I was up here tending the zoo. However, my campus spies tell me that Mounties fans are school spirit personified.

I'm told by certain "reliable" sources that several prestigious members of the faculty, including President Kelchner, Dean Maresco, and Mr. Lemasters, were there cheering the team on. The pep band was there in full force, and the gym was packed by enthusiastic fans. I hear there was even a chicken there. No, not bar-b-qued. I'm told he was a yellow chicken wearing white sneakers. (And you wonder why I doubt the reliability of my sources?) Someone told me that Vince gave a spirited drum performance to spur the team on to victory. Never mind that it didn't.

So, we lost. Everyone loses once in a while. I think the spectators should be commended for their spirit and support.

Better luck next time, guys! I hope you all continue to support the team and keep the school spirit alive!

last week Michael Jackson held down the top spot on the album chart ("Thriller") as well as the singles chart ("Say, Say, Say"). This feat allowed Jackson to be the first act to simultaneously have the top album and the top single, with the single not on the album, since Elton John accomplished the task back in 1975 with his "Greatest Hits" album and his single "Lucy In the Sky with Diamonds." Who says we don't do research?

Incidentally, Elton takes his current single "I Guess That's Why They Call It the Blues" up two spots to number 6 this week. See you soon with more Musical Notes.

MU 58 CW PORT 55

In the opening game of the FX Matt Basketball Classic at LeMoyne College, the Mounties survived late turnovers to upset the CW Post Pioneers 58-55.

Port was the tenth rated team in NCAA Division II.

Despite trailing by six, 36-30, at intermission, Mansfield fought back and took the lead for good, 45-43, with 11:56 remaining. With 4:13 to go, Port found themselves down by six, but took advantage of MU's turnovers to pull within one, but missed the final shot at the buzzer.

Gerard Conyers and Craig Cooley paced the Mounties in scoring with 14 and 13 points respectively.

Levelle White came off the bench, in the final eight minutes, to score seven of the Mounties' nine points in the span.

Congers pulled down six caroms to lead MU in rebounding.

MU 85 LEMOYNE 58

Faced by tournament MVI Craig Cooley's 17 points, MU trounced host LeMoyne, 85-58 in the championship game of the FX Matt Basketball Classic.

The Mounties led, 17-11, at the 14 minute-mark of the first half, but that was as close as Le Moyne would get the rest of the night.

Mansfield held a 43-30 lead at half-time.

Gerard Conyers popped in 15 points and was named to the All-Tournament Team.

Nelson Tuitt added 11 points and 10 rebounds to the winning cause. Chris Venning chipped in with 10 points.

MU 53 BLOOMSBURG 46

The Mounties picked up an important conference win, as they downed visiting Bloomsburg 53-46.

Jeff Singer pumped in 10 second-half points, including a key jumpshot with 2:45 remaining to put MU ahead 47-44. Gerard Conyers added 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Mounties, who are currently ranked 19th in Division III by UPI.

The Fabulous Four

by Eric Keir

They came to this campus four years ago as unknown freshmen, but when they leave in May, they will be remembered as the four who established MU as a volleyball POWERHOUSE.

Starting since their freshmen year, the spiking foursome of Kim Daniels, Barb Johnson, Sandy Stivers, and Kathy Shufelt have established a four-year win-loss record of 144-31, and have participated in three post-season national tournaments.

As freshmen in 1980, the team was 35-14 and trekked to Spokane, Washington for their first national playoffs. In their sophomore season, a record of 29-4 took them to Sacramento, California for nationals.

However, a 37-6 record in 1982 went for naught, as they lost the PSAC championship match when Daniels and Shufelt left the match with injuries within minutes of each other.

They ended their careers with a record-shattering season, the team's 43-7 season record, including a 15-3 mark against Division I schools, bettered the 37-win season of 1982. The senior lady spikers led the team to its first PSAC championship in three years, six first-place finishes out of nine tournaments during the season, and a trip to nationals at Jacksonville, Florida.

The 43-7 record of this season made the Lady Mounties the first team to have a 40-win season.

Not Ladies' Nite

by Eric Keir

The Lady Mounties led 55-54, with seven ticks left on the clock, but Bloomsburg's Kim Joerger hit a six-foot jump shot to give the Huskies a 56-55 victory.

Joerger's winning basket was her only points of the night as she replaced the Huskies leading scorer Jean Millen, (21 points, 12 rebounds) who had fouled out.

Dolores Stafford and Del Schneider also pulled down 21 rebounds.

The Lady Spikers also had the honor of being ranked 1st in the NCAA Division II Atlantic Region polls, as well as being in the top twenty nationally all season long.

The four also received individual honors as Daniels, Johnson, and Shufelt were named to the PSAC All-Tournament Team. Stivers earned honorable mention.

"The maturity and experience of the senior helped us to win almost half of our matches in 'come from behind' heart stoppers. I am as proud as any coach can be with what my four seniors have achieved in their four years," stated head coach Hugh Schintzius.

Strategic Planning Report

by Michael Nolle

The Mansfield University faculty got their first glimpse at the Strategic Planning Report earlier this week.

The majority of the reports were sent to the faculty, but other MU personnel also received copies. The report is in short supply, so it is not available to students on an individual basis.

The Strategic Planning Report, which is clearly marked with the word "draft," was issued to major student organizations in order to elicit student reaction. President Kelchner has also placed a copy of the draft on reserve in the Main library for student perusal.

The FLASHLIGHT secured a copy of the nine page report last Friday. The report contains recommendations in the main areas of academics, student services, physical planning, and institutional support.

Recommendations range from blanket generalizations to dated specifics. The following list covers some of the major points found in the report.

Although the recommendations are taken out of outline form, (as in the actual draft), their content is an exact reproduction of parts of the report.

Athletics

Combine the Director of Athletics, Department Chairperson and Intramural Director into one position effective July 1, 1985... Retrain some faculty for related areas such as Biology and Allied Health... Withdraw from the Penn State Athletic Conference... Change NCAA status from Division II to Division III... Reduce the number of intercollegiate sports to four for men and four for women.

Academic/Core Group I

Evaluate the effectiveness of Speech 101, as a core requirement... Eliminate Health as a core requirement effective September 1, 1984, for all students... Reduce required physical education courses from 3 to 2 effective September 1, 1984, for all students... Eliminate studio art and art history as majors... (Within the Dept. of Music) as retirements occur, explore alternative methods of instruction... Limit concentration to certain musical instruments... Implement the Mass Communications Program with the Department of English.

Group III/Group IV

Create the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science... Create the Department

Convocation Convenes

Dr. James McCormick, Chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, was the speaker at Tuesday's convocation.

The convocation began with a presentation of Handel's ZADOK THE PRIEST by MU's Concert Choir and Wind Ensemble directed by Dr. David Dick.

After his welcoming remarks, President Kelchner talked about the Strategic Planning Committee's Long Range Plan.

Kelchner asked that all concerned read the report and submit their comments or criticisms to the committee.

He talked about several new programs which are being developed and stated that work

Psych Lab Has Breakdown

by Christine Conning

As most people have probably noticed, the old psychology lab attached to North Hall is in the process of being demolished.

According to Mr. McGinnes, Dean of Administration and Finance, a construction crew, supplied by the University, began work on the building over Christmas break and should be finished soon.

The crew began by removing the walkway that connected the psychology lab with North Hall and then moved on to the lab itself.

According to University officials, the psychology lab and the walkway were both fire and safety hazards and had been condemned by the Board of Health.

The building was not safe for use or habitation. It had not been used by students or faculty for several years.

Had anyone been injured while in the building or on the walkway, the school would have been liable. This was not a chance the University was prepared to take.

The University plans on planting grass where the lab used to be. Nothing permanent will be done to the area because no one knows what the fate of North Hall will be.

According to McGinnes, the demolition of the psychology lab has no bearing on the future of North Hall.

McGinnes stated that the psychology lab is only an addition to North Hall, and is being treated as such.

The Great Gretzky was finally stopped after scoring at least one point in 51 straight games. He's only been around five years, but by the time he hangs up his skates, he'll own every NHL scoring board...

Speaking of hanging 'em up, Pete Rose should. He recently signed with the Montreal Expos and is going to play the outfield again, after five years at first base. Come on Pete, Grecian Formula only stops gray hair, not age...

Tom Brookens may be out as starting third baseman for the Detroit Tigers, but he just signed a two-year contract with them...

China has accepted a formal invitation to compete in the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles. It will be China's first Olympics in half a century. Ironically, the last time China participated in the Olympics, was in L.A. in 1932...

While I'm on the subject of the Olympics, ABC has purchased broadcast rights to the 1988 Winter Olympics for a record $309 million—nearly $100 million more than it paid for this year's Summer Games...

Since they lost Tom Seaver, their biggest gate attraction, the New York Mets have come up with an interesting attraction for this season. Because Darryl Strawberry is the only player in the big leagues with the last name of Strawberry, they have announced April 29 as Strawberry Sunday. They are going to give away 30,000 strawberry sundaes. I hope it isn't hot that day, or it will be a flop just like the team...

Cheyney 69, MU 48

It was cold outside, but twice as cold inside Decker gym, as the Mounties shot only 28 percent from the floor, as they dropped a 69-48 PSAC game to conference foe Cheyney.

The Mounties, currently ranked 10th in NCAA Division II, also saw their ten game winning streak stopped, their best since 1962 and their best start since 1975-76.

The loss also knocked MU from the top spot in the PSAC East, which Cheyney now holds.

MU made 19 of 69 attempts, while Cheyney was 25-for-54 for 46 percent.

Trailing 27-22 at intermission, MU drew within one, 31-30, at the 3:43 mark of the second half. However, Cheyney ran off 10 unanswered points, six by game high scorer Keith Smith, to put the game on ice.

Smith finished the night with 17 points. Gerard Conyers paced MU with nine.

MU 90, St. John Fisher 61

Paced by Chris Venning's 21 points, the Mounties downed visiting St. John Fisher 90-61.

Nelson Tuitt added 15 and Gerard Conyers and Alan Spicer each chipped in with ten, as all 13 Mounties scored.

MU shot 49 percent from the field (36-of-74) and 75 percent from the free throw line (18-of-24).

Cheyney 102, MU 45

Cheyney, the 12th-rated team in NCAA Division I, led by All-American Yolanda Laney's 35 points, showed why they are a Division I power, as they downed the Lady Mounties 102-45.

Dolores Stafford led MU with 14 points.

St. John Fisher 85, MU 55

Beth Yelverton popped in 21 points to pace St. John Fisher to their 85-55 win over the Lady Mounties.

T.J. Horton was high scorer for MU with 13 points.

Athletic Suggestions

by Eric Keir

The first draft of a university-wide strategic plan requested by interim President Rod Kelchner has recommended that the number of intercollegiate sports be limited to four each for men and women and that the school leave NCAA Division II and return to Division III. The plan also recommended that MU withdraw from the PA State Athletic Conference (PSAC) and that the school's intramural program be expanded. PSAC membership is open only to Division II schools.

The draft also recommended that the positions of athletic director, chairman of the Department of Athletics and intramural director be held by one person, effective 1985.

Changing to Division III could help the Athletic Department's budget by reducing travelling costs and would generate more rivalries in the Twin Tiers and surrounding area.

MU now offers eight intercollegiate sports for women and seven for men. Changing to four each would save money and free current coaches for assignment in other academic areas. One proposal under study would retrain some coaches and assign them part-time to other departments, such as the Department of Biology and Allied Health.

ATTENTION MU ATHLETES, COACHES, STUDENTS, FACULTY:

Fill out the following survey and send it to the Sports Editor of the FLASHLIGHT, Room 217 Memorial Hall.

is being done to overcome any shortcomings.

In particular, he noted how we can demonstrate our compliance with Section 504 of the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 dealing with services for the handicapped, and how MU is improving its Affirmative Action programs.

Kelchner then introduced Dr. McCormick, who prefaced his remarks by pointing out the historical contributions made by Pennsylvania's State System of Higher Education.

McCormick also stated that preparation and planning are the keys to the survival of the system.

There have been strategic plans for individual/institutions before. Now McCormick feels we have the first long range plan for the entire state system.

Dr. McCormick noted the flexibility of the new long range planning procedures. These take into account all of the local, state, and national trends and problems. They also make allowances for shifts and changes.

He cited the biggest problems to be faced in the future as a decline in demographics, the competition for funds, and the growing opinion that there may not be a need for an extensive higher education system.

The solution to our problems, present and future, is enthusiasm, McCormick stated.

He pointed to the diversity of the state, from the urban living of Philadelphia to the rural life of

Kelchner Interview

by Michael Nolle

"The committee certainly satisfied my request of them. I had asked them to take a broad look at the university, and I think those recommendations certainly represent a broad segment of the university," said President Kelchner regarding his initial reaction to the Strategic Planning Report.

Kelchner added that he had asked the committee to make the recommendations direct and succinct. He believes the committee adhered to this request.

In an interview with the FLASHLIGHT, Kelchner said he did not have any formal reactions to the report, and he does not anticipate any reaction until after the report is formally submitted.

President Kelchner believes that any opposition to the draft will be directed toward the Strategic Planning Committee.

The President said he is anxious to learn the reaction of the faculty, students, and various organizations.

Kelchner stressed that he cares about what the students want, and he hopes to get their approval before implementing any policies.

Tioga County and said that this diversity, as reflected in our higher education system, is our strength and our uniqueness. McCormick urged everyone to "Cherish the difference."

He pointed out that we have tremendous resources including hundreds of acres of land, buildings, a collective library of hundreds of thousands of volumes, and close to ten thousand professional instructors, administrators, and support personnel.

Dr. McCormick also stated that he believes the State System of Higher Education and Mansfield University have a great future.

However, Kelchner said he will not be afraid to implement unpopular recommendations, if he feels they are in the best interests of the University.

Kelchner has the final authority on some policy changes. In other cases, he will have to gain approval of the Board of Governors and/or the Council of Trustees.

He said "Very few of those recommendations do I intend to treat unilaterally."

The report calls for some specific changes in the core courses, including the elimination of health as a requirement for all students.

Kelchner felt it would be inappropriate to comment about any specific changes. He does expect some modification in the academic structure.

Removing the computers from the library is recommended in the report.

Kelchner said there has been some discussion about locating a space on campus, which could be connected into a lab for com-

Notes From Butler

I
Dr. Barbara Memory has been named assistant professor in Music Therapy in the Mansfield University Music Department. The announcement was made by Interim President Rod Kelchner.

The new position was created by the fast growth of the Music Therapy program, Dr. Kent Hill, department chairperson, said. Dr. Memory will join present music therapist Mrs. Elizabeth Eidenier who established the MU program in 1978. The program has grown from eight students the first year to 62 this year, Dr. Hill said.

Dr. Memory holds degrees in Music Theory/Literature and Music Therapy from Michigan State University, a Master of Music in Music Therapy from Florida State University and a Ph.D. in Music Education and Music Therapy from Michigan State. In addition to being a registered music therapist with extensive clinical experience, Dr. Memory has also performed as violinist with many chamber groups, orchestras and symphonies.

She will also perform as second violinist in the Mansfield University String Quartet.

and quality of one of the outstanding music therapy programs in the Northeast," Dr. Hill said.

Hill added that this was a banner year for the music department with an entering class of 78 music majors, the largest in 10 years. This brings the undergraduate enrollment up to over 200 music majors.

II
David J. Borsheim, associate professor of horn at Mansfield University, will perform a recital of his compositions and arrangements, Sunday, February 5 at 3 p.m. in the MU Steadman Theatre.

In addition to Borsheim's compositions, the recital will include works by Bach, Purcell, Handel and Mahler. MU music professors Kent Hill, Michael Galloway, and Stephen McEuen, as well as some of Borsheim's students, will accompany him.

The recital is free and open to the public.

III
Dick Talbot, professor of music, presented a clinic last week to the Instrumental Music teachers of District V in Monaca, PA. The clinic, "Teaching Musicianship through the Percussion Ensemble," was sponsored by the New Brighton Music Center, the PMEA and the Selmer Co., of Elkhart, IN. Dick is a member of the Selmer Clinic Staff.

Record Review

by Ed Cerny and Chris Graves

Welcome back to, MU and another great semester of music!

Due to the difficulty of the pre-established 5-star rating system, Ed and I have decided to eliminate it in favor of a new 1-10 scale, 1 being poor, 10 being outstanding. This will include not only albums, but videos as well.

We feel that the 10 scale system will make our job easier when indicating subtle differences in the music, and, due to the rising popularity of the music video, we want to include a review of the latest in MTV.

The videos will be rated just like the record reviews, but with three scores.

The first score will be the song as a single. The second score will be the song as a video and the third an average of the two.

If you have any comments, suggestions, or corrections, please send them to Ed Cerny, Box 515, Cedarcrest B.

To start the year off, we have the latest installment from Adam Ant, STRIP. It's surprising that after a streak of success with his previous albums, Adam Ant appears to have lost sight of the style that gained him his initial popularity.

As for the lyrics, the Ant style seems to have turned from social rebellion to sexual perversion.

Eight of the ten tracks either refer to or blatantly state some sexual situation, for instance, the titles themselves: "Navel to the Neck," "Libertine," and "Strip."

If you still have doubt as to his intent, examine the lyrics for yourself. We would have included a sample, but moral decency prevents us from doing so.

The only redeeming factor is that Phil Collins plays percussion on two songs, the title song "Strip" and "Puss 'N Boots." It's nice to see Phil Collins exploring new horizons. Keep exploring, Phil.

The album is a big disappointment. Only die-hard Adam Ant fans may find it entertaining. On our scale of 1-10, we give STRIP a four, with hopes that Adam will re-evaluate his moral scruples before writing his next album.

The video for this week is the Eurhythmic's "Who's That Girl?". The song is from their newest album TOUCH. Don't expect the same sharp images presented in "Sweet Dreams..." because they aren't there. In fact, the video fails to support the song at all.

The only reason we can see for enjoying this video is to see Annie Lennox in a blond wig and black lingerie smashing chairs on stage while Dave Stewart annoys various women with his Jiffy-Pop hair. We're talking dull.

The song, however, is very good with its haunting synthesized sound that made "Sweet Dreams..." so

Another Worthless Opinion

The report of the Strategic Planning Committee is undoubtedly the biggest story of the semester, including the return of Mike's "humor column." I hope you all follow the results of this report (the Planning Committee's, not Mike's) carefully, because it affects every one of you.

I don't envy the committee their responsibilities over the past months. I'm sure it's been a very time-consuming, difficult task. However, it's one that needed to be done, and I congratulate them and thank them for their efforts.

Some of these suggestions are quite minor; others could have a greater impact on the students and faculty. As students, you need to keep your eye on departmental and curriculum changes and adaptations. These are the items that will effect your choice of major and your scheduling options.

President Kelchner has also invited students and faculty members to submit their suggestions. I think this is admirable of him. This is an opportunity that would not have been available to us a year or two ago.

MU's academic offerings need to be changed and updated to fit the needs of today's college student. The changes that are implemented won't effect me because I'll be gone, but I hope they will be beneficial to both incoming and returning students. I have already heard a few rumblings of controversy around campus.

I'm anxious to see what suggestions are finally chosen for implementation. I wouldn't want to have to make those decisions. Some of them could turn out to be very unpopular, no matter how necessary or practical they may be. The decision on whether or not to leave NCAA Division II competition and return to Division III should raise some amount of controversy. I'd hate to find myself in the middle of that one. Not that I don't have an opinion on it—I do, but I'm not going to tell YOU what it is!

Two hundred proposals, plus the additional input from students and faculty, is a lot to consider. I wish President Kelchner all the luck in the world as he makes decisions on these suggestions over the next few weeks.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I would like to respond to a letter written by Martin T. Gassner that appeared in the Flashlight the week of December 8, 1983. The letter which I speak of severely cut down the "Record Review," the weekly article in the Flashlight which reviews newly released albums. In Mr. Gassner's letter, he explains how he prides himself in the ability he has to "listen to music objectively and with an open mind;" the first problem I saw right away by Mr. Gassner's evaluation is that he also lacks the ability to read with an open mind. The writers of Record Review aren't trying to BS readers into believing everything they say! They aren't salesmen for Columbia House! C'mon, Mr. Gassner, they have nothing to lose if everyone who reads the Flashlight doesn't agree with their opinions, and nothing to gain save self assurance if they do! Their column isn't a sales pitch! It is a well-authored, well-written article about popular music.

I might add, Mr. Gassner, that as a music major you are not alone. Ed Cerny and Chris Graves, the writers of R.R., are music majors here at MU, and both are fine musicians. They don't just slam any record on a turntable and listen to the songs, they, too, have the ability to listen to the MUSIC! And who are you to judge the groups or musicians who appear in Record Review if you have not yet heard their album?!? I may not be a fourth year music major, but as a musician and a reader, my case is closed. I believe, Mr. Gassner, you put it this way: "If you don't know what you're talking about...don't talk."

Sincerely,
Jeff R. Bridgman

Dear Editor,

Last semester there was some question about the radio station's new format. After that semester, and into this semester, we along with other people on campus, have realized why Mr. O'Dea initiated change of WNTE's format. The previous form of the radio station really did need something new.

When the officers of the radio station were elected, it was obvious that there was a need for change. Mr. O'Dea, being elected to the position of Production Manager, evidently saw this need for change. He and his staff did change the station, which many of us rejected.

When change is initiated it is custom for the "rejection" of the new idea to become known and for people to object to the change, and that we did. The rejection or objection we found now has been eliminated.

The format of the radio station has been accepted by the campus here at Mansfield University. The DJ's have improved 100 percent and the radio station is more powerful than before. The reception range has improved an additional 100 percent from the previous semesters.

In conclusion, we would like to thank Mr. O'Dea and the managers of the radio station for allowing us to get used to the change. The main point being we rejected change and have accepted the change. WNTE you're doing a good job, so keep up the good work.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is a letter sent to President Kelchner by Mr. Fred Borda. He sent a copy of that letter to me and asked that it be printed in the "letters" column.

Dear Mr. Kelchner,

As a freshman attending Mansfield University, I would like to express my discontentment with a situation of which I am sure you are aware.

Until last Thursday, Jan. 19, I was enrolled in Accounting 111, section E. That section was canceled. Do you know why it was canceled? I am sure you do. It was canceled because there was no one to teach it. Doesn't that sound a little bit ridiculous—a university without professors? This was not unavoidable, though. It is my understanding that the business department requested permission to advertise for the needed professor in the WALL STREET JOURNAL, but that the administration of The University denied it that permission, arguing that it would not be cost effective.

Yes, I suppose it is less expensive to dump the students into the other sections of the course than to hire someone to teach them. The section of ACC 111 I have scheduled will be taught by three different professors over the course of the semester. Do you realize how badly this class will lack continuity and consistency?

I feel as though I am somehow being shortchanged or cheated. I am paying for my college education entirely on my own, and I have worked very hard for the money to do so thus far. In return for my tuition, I expect to receive an education which is, at the very least, "adequate." I realize that an education is no more than what you make of it, but you must admit that it is difficult to make anything out of a course with no professor.

Situations such as this are not uncommon in the department which currently draws the most students to The University (and presumably the most money), the business department. It would seem as though little is done to accommodate and facilitate the learning experience of the students enrolled in the most popular academic program of study on campus. It is for this reason that I have chosen to transfer from Mansfield as soon as it is practical for me. I am not alone in my decision. Others have voiced the very same complaints to me.

The word is spreading that Mansfield's business program is not at all what the high school guidance counselors and the admissions recruiters tell us it is. When the word has spread far enough, the enrollment in the business program will begin to decline. Maybe then it will seem cost effective to have spent that extra few hundred dollars for the Spring of 1984.

I would like to thank you very much for your time. I hope you realize that I simply could not sit by and be deprived of what I consider to be my money's worth without expressing my dissatisfaction. Thank you once again.

Very truly yours,
Fred A. Borda

The report also calls for a long range plan for the continual updating of the computers.

Kelchner said, "The University has to exercise intelligence in purchasing new computers, in order to avoid getting outdated equipment.

He feel MU needs more micros, and that the University is currently negotiating for a new main frame.

Kelchner discussed certain recommendations that deal with providing more campus-related activities. He speculated that the committee may have guessed that the University is losing students since many people complain that there isn't anything to do on weekends.

The committee may fear a good number of student transfers because of lack of campus activity.

The President hopes to improve MU as a cultural center through increasing the frequency of the Fine Arts programs. This would include sponsoring more internal and external productions.

Kelchner has a desire to better utilize Straughn Auditorium, and would like to see the building renovated.

Athletics are a major topic in the report. There is a recommendation which suggests changing the University's NCAA status from Division II to Division III. Kelchner said the basic difference between Division II and Division III is the amount of financial aid the school can give an athlete.

In Division II, a school is permitted to issue financial aid based on athletic ability. Division III status permits granting aid on need only.

Kelchner believes the committee is asking "can we afford to be a Division II school and com-pète so we are respectable in the won/lost column?"

The President added "If you don't have scholarships. Some of your programs, like football, are going to suffer.

Although Kelchner is an ex-football coach, he promises not to demonstrate bias in dealing with athletics.

While at Mansfield, Kelchner has worked in athletics, teaching, external and student affairs. He plans to view the report in an objective manner.

Dean Higgins Resigns

by Denise Bess

John Higgins, Academic Dean of Education, has announced his resignation, effective June 1, 1984.

In an interview Dean Higgins said that he reached the decision to resign just before Christmas.

Higgins handed in his resignation on January 18, stating that he wants to spend more time with his family.

According to Dean Higgins, his wife has had a separate career in Pittsburgh for the last four years. He said that their children have graduated from college, and he and his wife are now planning to move to another part of the country.

Higgins stated he has no definite plans for the future. He has had some correspondence with some colleges regarding the position of president. He has also had some offers from high schools for the position of principal.

Mr. Higgins said that in most colleges, when a new administration takes over, the old administration usually resigns so to give the new administration a freer range in their decision-making policies.

President Kelchner stated there are no plans to replace Dean Higgins at this time.

Kelchner stated that he feels this would be a good time to decide if the post of Academic Dean is a necessary one.

Dean Higgins will formally announce his resignation at the next Board of Trustees Meeting.

Kelchner Addresses SGA

by Michael Nolfie

Interim President Rod Kelchner addressed the student concerns regarding the Strategic Planning Report at the Student Government meeting on Tuesday.

After making a few introductory remarks, Kelchner answered questions from SGA senators, representatives from student organizations, and individual students.

Kelchner outlined three basic reasons on why he called for the report. They are: The decreasing number of students who will be attending college in the next five to ten years, the changing academic interests of the student, and the University's financial concerns.

President Kelchner said that after he receives the report officially, he wants to hold three meetings which would be open to students, faculty, and other MU personnel. At these meetings individuals will be able to ask specific questions, and find out more about the report.

Kelchner said he will be able to implement some of the recommendations immediately, but that others will take time and further study. He said he will employ three guidelines in making decisions about the proposed recommendations. They are: 1) Will it improve the educational quality at Mansfield? 2) Will it attract students? 3) What impact will it have on the budget?

The meeting was then opened for questions. Representatives from the Black Student Union felt that the students were not aware of all of the implications of the report. They suggested that students be sent to high schools in order to recruit more minority students.

The Union also questioned what Mansfield is doing to solve the problem of losing students through transferring or dropping out. Kelchner said he plans to take major steps to solve the problem of student retention of not only minority students, but all students at MU.

One student said he felt the report reflected that the university does not have a serious interest in minorities. He said the word "minority" is only mentioned twice in the report.

Kelchner countered by saying that in his twenty years at Mansfield he has seen a lot of concern for minority students.

Representatives from the Art Department asked why the Art Program should be cut. They said enrollment in-art is going up at Mansfield. Kelchner replied that he did not know where the committee got their information on the Art Program. He added that he will know much more about it when he officially receives the report. Dean Maresco speculated that the committee may have gone by

by Dan Mason

Tired of hanging around the dorms? Stereo on the fritz? Nothing to do and no one to do it with? Let Clarence Crisp handle it.

Mr. Crisp, Director of the Students Activities Office, is setting up another game room.

According to Crisp, the game room will not be targeted toward the manual dexterity required for the pinball and video games. Neither will it be aimed at the agility and brute force required for ping-pong and pool.

The new game room will be targeted toward the more serious and relaxed student, Crisp said.

The room will be furnished with wall-to-wall carpeting and comfortable furniture. Backgammon and chess boards will be available to students. There will also be a stereo with headphones for students who want to relax with their favorite arias, fugues, or rock groups.

Crisp stated that the new game room will be open for student use sometime around Spring Break. It will be located in 211 Memorial Hall.

Just For Laughs

by Michael Nolle

Did you ever wonder if Superman rescues more men than women? I did. And why does he wear those effeminate purple leotards? Not very "macho," if you ask me.

No, I'm not doing my Andy Rooney impression. (I only do that on Sunday). I'm just in a good mood, that's all. And why shouldn't I be? I just caught a small preview of the upcoming MU theatre production Feiffer's People.

Finally, a FUNNY play will be presented at Mansfield. Now, I'm not cutting down the last few productions, because there has been quality theatre at MU recently. (STREETCAR immediately comes to mind). But I feel it is time to put aside the poignant drama of STREETCAR and the tragedy of MEDEA, and move on to good old-fashioned hilarity.

Maybe I'm wrong. Maybe the campus doesn't want to see short sketches, which range from a satire on our society's fascination with Superman to a Twilight Zone-ish skit entitled "George's Moon," featuring an intro by an actor imitating Rod Serling. Or maybe people don't want to watch a mock game show which allows the studio audience control the contestant's destiny.

Of course, if I am wrong, then so is the Student Director, Laurie Bowen. She chose to direct Feiffer's People as an alternative to the aforementioned heavy dramas. And with WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? on the schedule for spring, she feels the campus community deserves a chance to come to the theatre just to laugh.

Bowen suggests that the comedy in Feiffer's People lies in the fact that the audience can relate to the characters in one way or another. She said the scenes are about ordinary people who the average person may have met or possibly known very well. Theatre-goers may even see themselves in a particular situation.

Feiffer's People stars Guy McMullen, Robert Schofield, Sara Kauffman, Michael Getz, and Julie Maxwell in equal roles. There are no leads; the cast works as an ensemble in a series of short sketches.

These vignettes range from about twenty seconds to just over five minutes, with the average being close to a minute each. Feiffer's People is not intricately tied together. The actors all play a number of characters, and there are only a few characters who repeat in several scenes throughout the production.

Bob Schofield, a senior theatre major who has excelled at comedy in numerous Mansfield productions, portrays one of the continuing characters, Bernard. Bowen said that Bob has greatly added to the comedy by improvising during rehearsals.

In fact, Bowen encouraged innovation and creativity from her entire cast. If they had a wild idea, they could try it out without fear of reprisal. The "fooling around" on stage has led to many funny parts, which will remain intact on opening night.

Guy McMullen, who plays the host in the outlandish game show skit, said he feels the lengths of the skits greatly enhance the comedy values. McMullen said that unlike "Saturday Night Live" or "The New Show," the skits do not drag on forever.

Bowen said she does not want to preach to her audience, but added, "You can still learn something about human nature from the show." Feiffer's People might be best described as a satire of our prejudices. The play makes references to the Vietnam War, integration, racism, bomb shelters, and a host of other popular topics.

The student director chose not to produce the entire play because of length considerations. She said she tried to select the best material, and that her show is composed of about 60 short sketches. The entire program should last about ninety minutes. There will not be an intermission.

If you've noticed that this article is jumping around from subject to subject, then you are very observant. (Actually, I'm glad you have noticed the inconsistency because in national tests the only person not to recognize it was Doc Carlson.) I'm only trying to prepare you for the play. One thing I should mention is that Feiffer's People will be presented on Feb. 16, 17, and 18 at 8:00 pm in Allen Hall Theatre. (There is a slight charge for tickets.)

I should also mention a few more basics about the show. One of the main reasons Bowen selected this particular script is because it does not offend anyone. It contains the bare minimum in profanity, and it doesn't even highlight certain sexual innuendos. In other words, it is suitable for anyone at the college, without only appealing to devout fans of the Archies (i.e. it's real-not sugary comedy).

Hey. Relax. I caught you worrying about those long scene changes. Well don't worry, there aren't any in this play. The "set" consists of six blocks and six chairs. The skits happen in rapid succession, with nothing to hold them up.

Bowen and her Assistant Director, Lance Benson, are currently getting all the sound and light cues in order. That's not an easy job considering there are sixty sketches. That's a lot of light cues.

Now stop worrying about those long drawn-out costume changes. The actors will wear jeans with a plain color shirt. There are only a few small accessories, such as sunglasses and small hand props. The action is continuous; there are no breaks a la Laugh-In style, sans commercials.

If you don't like this type of comedy, then I suggest you skip this play and immediately send your local Theatre Department chairmen a petition to produce ANTIGONE III-THE FINAL CONFLICT. If on the other hand this sounds appetizing, then stay tuned to you local Fine Arts Editor for more details. I'll have an advance review next week.

Big Band Sounds

Glenn Miller is alive and well and living in Elmira.

Well, not exactly, but the sounds of the swing era will be at the Clemens Center in a special Big Band Show.

The show stars Johnny Desmond, Helen Forrest, the Horace Heidt Orchestra, and the Modernaires with Paula Kelly, Jr.

The sounds of the great bands of the 30's, 40's, and 50's are today not only a nostalgic remembrance, but an exciting musical experience as well.

The 1980's have brought an upsurge of enthusiasm for the big band sound, and the youth of today are joining their parents listening and dancing to the music of that time.

The Big Band Show recreates the sound with some of its all-time greats.

Johnny Desmond's initial fame came as a soloist with Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band and was increased by his recording hits of "Yellow Rose of Texas," "C'est si bon" and "The High and the Mighty," and through his numerous Broadway, TV, and nightclub appearances.

Helen Forrest is the renowned lead singer of such legendary bands as those of Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman and Harry James. With all three, she recorded the first of her all-time bestsellers, among them, "I had Spandau Ballet has struck gold this time around with their second album, TRUE. Their first album, JOURNEY TO GLORY, started a fashion craze when it was released in England. The group's preppy look and tie-dye hair influenced a mainstream fashion look in London's leading dance clubs. By the time the group debuted at New York's Underground, JOURNEY TO GLORY had gone gold and top Five in England.

Their second album, TRUE, reflects their clean-out image. With their flowing melodies and danceable rhythms, Spandau Ballet has claimed a spot on the American charts. Tony Hadley, the sometimes over-dramatic lead singer of the group has led Spandau Ballet to the top, starting with their first hit single "True." Other tracks include "Communication," "Lifeline" and the newly released song "Gold," which is already in the top 30.

Puppet People

by Michael Nolfie

It is a little-known fact that certain science professors at MU have puppet fetishes. They simply enjoy doing unnatural things to puppets.

I offer the above information as a warning to Philadelphia puppeteer, Steve Abrams. He may want to protect his puppets when he presents a puppet show in Room 153, Grant Science Center on the MU campus.

The performance will be on Wednesday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Abrams is a professional puppeteer who has given over 2,000 performances in his 15 year career. Each song on TRUE can be very appealing on it's own, however, listening to the entire album all at once can prove monotonous. Despite this aspect, we do highly recommend the album on it's easy listening and danceable qualities. We rate TRUE an eight.

The latest video installment from Van Halen is "Jump." The song shows a great contrast when compared to their previous songs. Van Halen seems to be taking advantage of the Syntho-Pop sound that is now popular among the leading groups. "Jump" is an exhilarating and uplifting song full of driving rhythms and a simplistic, but interesting, melody.

The video, on the other hand, is not so interesting. The entire video consists of pseudo-concert footage of Eddie Van Halen smiling like he just had a lobotomy. David Lee Roth offers what little energy the video has with his dynamic stage presence, acrobatic ability, and his message conveying techniques involving his microphone stand.

We rate the song "Jump" a nine, but the video only a four, giving Van Halen's "Jump," over-all, a whopping 6%.

He founded the Pan's Puppets in Philadelphia and in 1978 created "Folk Heroes of the Puppet Stage" for the University of Pennsylvania Museum.

The puppet show will be preceded by an open discussion with the puppeteer at 3 p.m. in the Grant Science Center. (Remember this is in April; so mark it down on your calendar now).

The discussion and Wednesday night performance are part of the Mansfield University Fine Arts Series. The events are free and open to the public. MU science professors are invited to attend, but are asked to control their perverted behavior.

This week I'm starting a new feature. I'm expanding my humor column to include an advice section. Yes, you read that correctly, but if you wish, you may reread it. Happy now?

I hereby promise to make a serious attempt to answer all inquiries and give only professional advice. And if you believe that, you'll believe that Tom Seaver's childhood fantasy was to play for the White Sox.

No, of course I'll throw in my usual smart comments. What do you expect by now?

Anyway, if anyone has any questions on dating, restaurants, music, theatre, kung-fu, the Beverly Hillbillies, or just about anything else, please send all correspondence to Michael Nolfie, Fine Arts Editor, FLASHLIGHT, Memorial Hall, MU. Please, no questions about Janis Joplin.

Now, I don't know much about everything, or even much about anything, but I will seek out the advice of experts to help the Craziest Dream" "The Man I Love" and "You Made Me Love You," all of which she will sing for the Big Band Show.

The Horace Heidt Orchestra, under the direction of Horace Heidt, Jr., will evoke memories of the popular radio program featuring Horace Heidt and the Musical Knights.

Heidt, Jr. was literally raised to the tunes played by the Musical Knights, and he has pulled from the archives the original arrangements composed for his father and reproduced the brilliant music of the original orchestra including "Bugle Call Rag" and "Duke Ellington Medley."

Singing groups come and go, but the Modernaires just keep swinging along with their unique blend of harmony and entertainment.

This group, with Paula Kelly, Jr. will be featuring their favorites from the Glenn Miller Orchestra. Since joining the Miller Band back in 1939, they have been the top vocal group longer than any other in the history of popular music.

They will perform many of the hits from that time period including "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and "Kalamazoo."

answer your questions.

You don't have to sign your real name, any kind of signature is fine. However, it will help if it relates to your actual situation or identity. For example, Mr. Lemasters may want to sign his letter "INCOMPETENT, AND NOT AS GOOD LOOKING AS JOE MARESCO," or a letter from Dave Fried could simply be marked "JERK."

At any rate, I hope to get some good responses. I'd hate to have to make up all the questions myself, or worse yet, just answer Tom Young's questions.

One thing though, we will try to print all letters received providing that they don't contain lots and lots of obscenity. If you want to send me a letter full of profanity and insults which just says what a loser and total jerk I am or how I'll never amount to anything, then please don't bother. I just got a letter from my mom yesterday.

I will also print interesting recipes, racing charts, scientific experiments, or just about anything else you may want to send in. However, please remember this will basically be a semi-regular advice column, so mail you questions today. I'll try to answer them in two weeks.

These big band luminaries present their style of swing on Friday, February 24, at 8:15 p.m. For ticket information, call the Clemens Center box office, or any area ticket outlet.

Not Necessarily the News

by Michael Nello

Dave Newcombe was a man with a dream. He dreamt of the day when the Residence Life staffs from every state university could meet together for one giant convention.

Newcombe was not the only one who harbored this noble fantasy. His ideas were complimented by the genius of Mr. Dave Fried. When Fried and Newcombe got together, it was truly a meeting of the minds.

Together, Fried and Newcombe developed and proposed a program where Residence Life staffs could gather to swap ideas and experiences. This proposal became a reality on February 3, when the first "University Connection" took place at the Indiana University of Pennsylvania (IUP).

The Housing and Residence Life staff at IUP worked hard to prepare "The University Connection." The conference consisted of workshops, interest sessions, and presentations about everything you wanted to know about residence life, but were afraid to ask.

Some of the seminars included "Burn-Out and the RA Type," "Responsible Drinking," "A Model for Homophobic Counseling," and the much awaited, "Ten Commandments of Programming."

Each State University sent anywhere from 10 to 25 members of their Residence Life staff. Everyone from Directors of Residence Life to Resident Assistants attended the University Connection.

Mansfield University sent ten representatives to IUP. They were: Dave Newcombe, Carmen Bianco, Nancy VanKuren, Terry Miller, Steve Konkolics, Eric Scheibeler, Carol Mitchell, Crystal Gilbert, Maryann Miller, and Elizabeth Pinter.

The two-day conference featured a wide variety in programming. Members from the IUP Residence Life staff provided many of the events, but representatives from other universities also coordinated several of the seminars. Mansfield's own Dave Newcombe, Nancy VanKuren, and Carmen Bianco presented informative programs.

Dave Newcombe, the man partly responsible for the conference, presented "Different Strokes for Different Folks." The program examined the feelings of students who are perceived as being different or stereotyped in a university committee.

Nancy VanKuren, Assistant Director of Residence Life at MU, presented "Resident Assistants and Student Development." The program provided RA's with an introductory knowledge of the student development theory, and also gave them a chance to share ideas with other RA's on student development.

Carmen Bianco, Assistant Director of Residence Life at MU, conducted a program on managing time. The course was intended to teach the residence life staffs how to be efficient managers of their time.

Every university that attended the conference was asked to submit program evaluation forms. Dave Newcombe said the reaction from the Mansfield delegation was a very positive one. Newcombe said he thought the program was a huge success. He is very glad his dream became a reality, and he is looking forward to "University Connection-Chapter II."

Offices Moved

by Bill Greenly

As of this semester the offices of Mathematics and Political Science and Sociology have moved from South Hall to Pinecrest.

According to a spokesman from the Sociology Department, the move was made so that department offices and those of the professors will all be in the same location.

The department benefiting the most from this move is the Psychology Department. Because of the recent demolition of the psychology lab, all of the equipment was moved to third floor South Hall.

There seem to be no problems with the move unless a major increase in student population causes a need for more dorm space.

Is it 'Noble' to Speak?

John Noble, a US citizen, was abducted by Soviet authorities in Germany and taken to a Siberian slave labor camp for ten years.

Though the US government suspected his captivity, the Russians denied his existence.

Born in Detroit, Michigan, John Noble was trapped in Germany during World War II. In 1945 he was falsely arrested by the Soviets and later deported to the Soviet Arctic slave camps.

Noble has traveled throughout America telling his story. He has appeared before national radio and television audiences and various Congressional committees. He is also the author of the books, I FOUND GOD IN SOVIET RUSSIA, and I WAS A SLAVE IN RUSSIA.

According to Noble, he escaped by writing a letter using another prisoner's name. The letter was smuggled out and mailed to his uncle and aunt in West Germany.

Noble's relatives realized he was not dead, as they had previously thought, and they contacted the US government.

The President contacted Moscow stating he wanted to know Noble's whereabouts.

Several weeks later, the Soviets took Noble out of the prison and later released him to the United States.

Noble is the founder and director of the Faith and Freedom Forum and was given the American Heritage Committee Book award in 1959.

In the late 1960's he received the George Washington Honor Medal for Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge.

In 1970, he received the Eisenhower Medal for his lectures from the Captive Nations Association.

Greg Peck, a spokesman for the Church of the New Covenant, stated that Noble will be speaking on campus through the church.

"Mr. Noble will be speaking at Mansfield University campus February 12 at 10:30 a.m. in Straughn Auditorium, and we would like to extend an invitation to all who would like to attend."

Scholarship Candidate

Phyllis Luce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Luce of Wellsboro, has been named a semi-finalist in the 1984 Harry S. Truman Scholarship Competition. Miss Luce is a sophomore political science major at Mansfield University.

The Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation was set up by Congress to award scholarships to students who will be college juniors in the following year and who have an outstanding potential for leadership in government.

Miss Luce was nominated by MU faculty and is the first person at MU to reach the semi-final stage in this national competition. She was among about 200 semi-finalists chosen from about 950 nominees from throughout the U.S.

Miss Luce was interviewed in Philadelphia on February 3. If she is named a scholarship recipient, she will be notified in April. Each scholarship award covers the cost of tuition, books, room and board, with a maximum of $5,000 annually for up to four years.

One scholarship is awarded each year to a resident nominee in each of the 50 states, as well as the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.

Happy Valentine's Day...

by Melodie Doud

Responses to the question "Why do you celebrate Valentine's Day?" range from "Because it's a special day," to "Why not? I'll celebrate anything."

Valentine's Day, while not a legal holiday, is celebrated by almost everyone every February 14th. However, very few people know the history of this day.

The Romans celebrated the feast of Lupercalia every February 15th.

During the celebration, young men and women chose partners by drawing names. Then the partners would exchange gifts. Many courtships that began during this festival eventually led to marriage.

After the spread of Christianity, Pope Gelasius changed the date of the festival from Feb. 15 to Feb. 14, and dubbed the day St. Valentine's Day.

This change occurred in 496 A.D. and was made to give the pagan festival Christian meaning.

The sentimental meaning of the pagan celebration has remained much the same.

The identity of St. Valentine is not known for sure.

One St. Valentine was jailed by the Romans during the 200's for helping persecuted Christians.

Around A.D. 270, the Romans beheaded this St. Valentine at the site of an ancient altar to Juno, the Roman goddess of women and marriage.

Another St. Valentine, who was a bishop, is said to have been persecuted for converting a Roman family to Christianity. He was beheaded in Rome around A.D. 273.

Valentine's Day may have been celebrated in England as early as 1446.

To chose their Valentines, young people would draw names from a vase. Young men would then present gifts to their Valentines.

This custom of gift-giving was gradually replaced by the sending of sentimental messages.

In the United States, Valentine's Day became popular during the Civil War.

Many of the Valentines sent during that period were hand painted. Some were decorated with satin, ribbons, feathers, mother-of-pearl, or dried flowers.

Some of these cards cost as much as $10 each.

Young women would display the cards and then put them away as keepsakes. These old Valentines have become valuable collector's items.

Today in Canada and the US, Valentine's Day is celebrated by the giving of cards, flowers, and candy. Some people celebrate the day with parties or special dinners.

During the discussion about the Art Program, Dean Maresco interjected his comments. He stated that the students should realize that these recommendations may never actually be implemented, and that the approved changes may be at a lesser degree and happen over a long period of time.

Kelchner stressed that although change is difficult to deal with, it is a necessary evil in our present system of higher education. He admitted that some of the recommendations are quite unpopular in certain circles, but he would implement any changes that are in the best overall interest of MU.

ROTC News

by Thomas Carroll

Sgt. Larry E. Gasper, who has been the Administrative Non-Commissioned Officer for the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) at MU for the past two years, has been reassigned to Ft. Belvoir, Virginia.

While at MU, Sgt. Gasper's duties included ordering uniforms, passing out paychecks for the cadets and cadre, and keeping records and scholarship applications for cadets.

Military Science Cadet James Vince said, "Sgt. Gasper was very student-oriented. His door was always open to anyone who had a problem."

Cadets Jack Bonsell and John Albrecht stated that Sgt. Gasper will be missed.

"Sgt. Gasper was a great guy, and I'm sorry to see him go. Many of the cadets would frequently go to his office to talk to him. He gave us insight into what it is like to be an enlisted man in the Army," Albrecht stated.

Assistant Professor of Military Science Capt. Harber stated that Gasper actively assured that students who came into his office would receive the help they were seeking.

Sgt. Gasper will be replaced by Staff Sgt. Donald Fystro.

Sgt. Fystro's former assignment was in Saudi Arabia, and his first choice for duty was Mansfield ROTC.

Sgt. Fystro heard about Mansfield University and the ROTC program here through the First ROTC Regional Head Quarters.

Several Cadets, and the members of the cadre stated that they would like to welcome Sgt. Fystro to MU and wish Sgt. Gasper happiness in the future.

JETS at MU

JETS, the Junior Engineering Technical Society, is a national, non-profit organization encouraging interest in engineering, technology, and science in high schools.

As part of MU's continued service to the community, and to aid in the recruitment of "hard science" students, MU will be hosting a JETS/TEAMS contest in the near future.

Tests of Engineering Aptitude, Math, and Science are given to high school students representing various schools and organizations.

Recognition is given to top students and schools with top aggregate scores.

Last Friday Mr. Mike McNamara, the Program Specialist for I.U. 17, met with Dr. George, Dr. Flesch, Dr. Dowling, and Mr. Mason as a first step in setting up the JETS competition.

Mansfield led 34-24 at the half, as well as the whole game, but came up short as West Chester downed them 70-73 in overtime.

West Chester's Sara Flanagan hit a short jump shot with two seconds remaining to send the game into overtime.

Deb Schneider's 29 points and 12 apiece by Dolores Stafford and Leslie Nicotera paced the Mountie scoring attack.

Conyers hauled down eight caroms to give Mansfield a 31-24 rebounding edge.

MU "Heros" Honored

by Eric Keir

In the meaning of the word, it is perhaps incorrect to call an athlete a "hero."

The word should be used to describe soldiers who fought for our country's freedom and those who have done a great service to mankind.

However, in the narrow frame of sports, a "HERO" is a man who has performed greatly in an event.

Under the interpretation of the word, it is fair to include such great athletes as S. Manford Lloyd, Francis Kelly, Terrence Crouthamel, Chester Wasilewski, Joseph Witowski, Harold Brace, Stewart Casterline, Ray Kodish, Dave Russell, Joe DeSanto, the late William Gibson, John Hyder and Frank Marra.

These men are the 13 original members of the Mansfield University Alumni Athletic Hall of Fame.

If their contributions to athletics at Mansfield were not heroic, they certainly performed in a manner that should provide inspiration to our athletes of today.

Nine of these men will be returning to their Alma Mater on February 11, where they will be presented with a charcoal drawing to be hung in the Lobby of Decker Gym at halftime of the MU-East Stroudsburg basketball game.

Last spring, a Hall of Fame Election Board was created. This board was made up of 11 alumni and three college officials. The board met April 10 to decide who would enter the Hall in its first year of existence.

After sorting through forty nominations, the board came up with 11 names for the general Hall, and two were selected to enter as honorary candidates.

Mara and Hyder were elected as the honorary members.

By no means is this list complete. The record books at MU are crammed with men who have left their mark on athletics here, and will someday join this elite group of athletes.

A Half-Hearted Editorial

Valentine's Day is creeping up on us again. The stores are stocked with cards, candy, and trinkets for the special day. (Nobody ever said love is cheap).

I guess Valentine's Day is okay. I like the idea of expressing the love we feel for the special people in our lives. Forking over a couple of bucks for a card that expresses these sentiments and $10 more for a few flowers to sweeten the message kind of rubs me the wrong way. Maybe I'm just jealous because no one ever sends any to me (Yes, that's a hint). Although a certain staff member did make promises. On the other hand, Valentine's Day can't be all bad. Even my Photography Editor approves of it. He says it's a good day to get to know people better. I can't argue with that.

Okay, I'll lighten up. Valentine's Day is a good time to express our love and appreciation to all those important people we tend to take for granted—parents, brothers, staff members, readers, boyfriends, girlfriends, etc. I'll even concede that cards and gifts are a thoughtful way of expressing those ideas. (No, I did not buy gifts for my staff. Sorry, guys!).

Ironically, this time of the year causes a lot of depression for many people. There are a lot of lonely people out there; you may even know one of them. You could send him or her a card or a flower; it might make the day more bearable for that person.

I hope your Valentine's Day is a special one and that you spend it with a special person.

Oh, yea— Happy Valentine's Day, Chris!

Mel

One more comment that has absolutely nothing to do with Valentine's Day. Please remember all letters submitted for publication MUST BE SIGNED. This is written in small print every week at the bottom of the staff box. However, I occasionally receive unsigned letters or messages for publication. I will gladly withhold names if you so request, but letters MUST be signed.

Dear Editor,

I am sure that many people are aware of MU's proposed Strategic Planning Report. I would like to commend the FLASHLIGHT for their thorough coverage of this issue, otherwise it may not have come to the attention of many students.

One of the more foolish recommendations calls for the elimination of mid-term grades unless a student receives D's or F's. I can't name one college that I know of that doesn't supply mid-term grades. I feel that this proposal was made because some professors don't take the time to compile mid-term grades. Instead, they give you a mark of satisfactory or unsatisfactory, which tells you very little.

Mid-term grades are beneficial to me as a student. They indicate to me where I stand and what I must do for the remainder of the semester to accomplish my academic goals.

Other proposals include cuts in the athletic programs. Wider participation in intramural sports would be the only way to compensate for these cuts, if it can be done effectively. The elimination of health as a required course is a good proposal. I didn't learn anything new in this course. However, it should still be offered as a three credit elective.

As a student who has taken Speech 101, I would like to see it retained as a requirement for all students. Mansfield is one of a few universities that requires a basic speech class of all students. I consider it an experience that is well worth it.

Again, thanks to the FLASHLIGHT for bringing this issue to strategic planning to the attention of the students.

Scott Rose

Dear Editor,

I was surprised to find that some members of the student body still do not know what the Strategic Planning Report is all about. Despite the large amount of publicity given to this report some students are apparently too apathetic to take the time to look into the report. Well, by the time this letter is published it will be too late to comment on the report.

Maybe we'll hear from those students who weren't interested in the report when their major is changed or when their athletic team is dropped.

Sincerely,

Jonathan E. Lightner

Dear Editor:

Last week, like many Mansfield students, I fell ill with the flu. Thinking myself on my deathbed, I begged a friend to drive me to Guthrie Clinic. She dropped me off and headed for her two o'clock class. I waited diligently for the doctor to return from an emergency. Meanwhile, the nurse kindly (and I emphasize the word) allowed me to lay down as I felt faint. Then she proceeded to take my temperature. I marvel at any nurse who can not believe that I can run a temperature of 102°. She needed to take my temperature several times to believe it. I thought she was going to take an average of them and record it.

Also, I would like to complain about the doctor at the clinic. I feel he is dispensing medicine on a mass basis. I received the same "little brown bag" of medicine for my flu symptoms as everyone else. When I looked in the bag I noticed I had received samples of Dolobid which instructed me to "see enclosed instructions for dosage." I looked high and low in the minute bag; however, there were no instructions. I took the two in each sample every four hours. I do hope I don't suffer any long-term effects from an overdose of this drug. As we all know, "Medicine can't help you if you don't take the proper dosage."

My third gripe is (once again) with security. I asked the nurse if security could drive me to my dorm since I really didn't feel at all well enough to walk the short distance. It took Security a complete half hour to drive to the Clinic. It really amazes me that, with all the money I pay for tuition, this University can not hire staff that are capable and willing to do their jobs.

I hope President Kelchner will seriously consider looking into these problems. And if he does fall ill, I don't suggest going to the clinic, as we might be short one president.

Hopefully Recovered!

Dear Editor,

I am currently a junior at MU majoring in Business Administration. I would like to express my total disgust and frustration over the situation involving the Business/Computer Science/Economics Department.

The suggestion to break this department apart is not economically practical. I feel if this would happen it would be very detrimental to the school, possibly even closing its doors in a few years.

On the other hand, adopting an accounting degree program which would be beneficial to the university seems to have been tabled indefinitely. Granted the administration gave the Business Department permission to search for accounting professors, but then the administration got involved and instructed them on how the search would be done. They weren't allowed to advertise in the WALL STREET JOURNAL or any other major newspapers. Instead, they had to advertise in smaller papers. That's like using Ford parts to fix a Porsche—they just don't work. I think you should let the people who know what to do spend the money. You have to spend money to make money.

For the sake of the students, I hope the administration and faculty can come to an agreement on staffing and educational needs of MU students. Because if something isn't done soon, people will start looking for other educational institutions which would gladly take their money and fulfill their educational needs.

Chris Bellavia

P.S. I'd like to commend the professors in the Business/Computer Science/Economics Department for their patience while being drastically overworked.

RANDOM NOTES

The extremely cold winter weather and accumulation of snow have combined to provide good winter sports recreation at the Corps of Engineer's Tioga-Hammond Lakes Project.

There is currently more than 18 inches of ice on the Hammond Lake. Fishermen are reporting success at catching perch, bluegill, bass, and pickerel. Some walleye are also being taken. A winter access point to the northern part of the Hammond Lake has recently been opened to the public. The access is located at a marked gate along the road to the Connecting Channel Overlook at Tioga-Hammond. The public is not permitted on the dams except for this specific location. This entrance will be closed if the ice becomes thinner than 4 inches or if any other hazardous condition occurs. This area will be closed to the public after winter ice fishing closes until next year's ice fishing season.

The Ives Run Recreation Area already has attracted numerous cross country skiers. There is a novice cross country trail approximately one mile in length. In addition, there are other trails and areas conducive to skiing. Some go in to state game land tract No. 37.

The public is reminded that snowmobiling is not permitted at the Tioga-Hammond or Cowanesque Lake Projects. Vehicles which include snowmobiles, ATVs, ATCs and 4-wheel drives are not allowed on the ice without written permission of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Questions about winter recreation at Tioga-Hammond and Cowanesque Lakes should be addressed to the park manager at RD 1 Box 65, Tioga, PA or by phoning (717)-835-5239.

MU Places 1st, 3rd in Gourman Report

by Melodie Doud

Mansfield University rated first place for graduate programs and third place for undergraduate programs in a report done by a California-based higher education rating organization.

According to the recently released Gourman Report of the National Educational Standards organization, only six percent of Pennsylvania colleges are rated better than adequate. Thirty percent of New York's schools and 55 percent of California's schools are placed in the upper ranges.

Of the state-owned universities in Pennsylvania, Mansfield University was rated first (2.73) for graduate programs and third for undergraduate programs (3.12).

A rating of 3.01 or above is considered adequate in undergraduate programs. A rating of 2.51 or above is considered adequate in graduate programs.

According to the report, only six percent of Pennsylvania colleges are rated better than adequate. Thirty percent of New York's schools and 55 percent of California's schools are placed in the upper ranges.

There are 14 state-owned universities in Pennsylvania. Their ratings are as follows with the undergraduate rating first and the graduate rating second:

West Chester—3.20, no

rating; Millersville—3.13, 2.13; Mansfield—3.12, 2.73; Shippensburg—3.10, 2.33; Kutztown—3.09, 1.85; Indiana—3.08, 2.46; Slippery Rock—3.02, 2.48; Lock Haven—2.98, no rating; East Stroudsburg—2.96, 2.43; Edinboro—2.95, 2.53; Clarion—2.93, 2.42; Cheyney—2.92, 2.02; California—2.91, 2.30; and Bloomsburg—2.90, 2.05.

Indiana University, which rated below MU, is the only one of Pennsylvania's state-owned universities that offers doctorates and has a graduate program which is far more comprehensive than any of the other institutions.

The Gourman Report states that Pennsylvania colleges and universities are, in general, "mediocre." It rates California and New York universities far above those in Pennsylvania.

The report evaluates colleges and universities on the basis of their objectives, curriculum, faculty, faculty research and honors, administration, library, budget, resources, student scores on standardized tests, and admissions policies.

The Gourman Report is considered as one measure of an institution's quality.

The results of the report are used as a reference for students who are selecting colleges. The report is also used by educators and businessmen to rate schools and programs.

North Hall Update

by Michael Nolle

Interim President Kelchner said there is no connection with the recent removal of the psychology lab and the walkway leading to North Hall and the recommendation in the Strategic Planning Report regarding the status of the building.

In an interview with FLASHLIGHT, Kelchner said the arcade had to be removed because it was a safety hazard. One reason was that it invited easy access to the abandoned building. The other principal factor was that the walkway was decaying.

Kelchner said the arcade was to be removed no matter what happens to North Hall.

Kelchner described the present situation regarding North Hall as very delicate.

At this time, there is a $6 million bill in the capital budget earmarked for the renovation of North Hall. Since the House and the Senate could not agree on the bill, it has been sent to committee.

Kelchner believes the bill will come out of committee with the $6 million intact, and then go to the governor for approval or veto.

When Mansfield went to the Historical Commission in June, they were told to look for ways to utilize North Hall. The administration replied that they required funding to renovate the building before they could use it.

The University then contracted a firm which conducted a study on estimating the costs for renovations.

Kelchner wanted to quell all rumors that the arcade and psychology building were removed in order to restore North Hall to its original look in hopes of securing funding from the Historical Commission.

He also stated there are no plans to remove any other parts of the building at this time.

The Interim President said there is some discussion that the University could renovate part of the building and remove other sections.

He cited the removal of the South wing and the renovation of everything from the main entrance north as a possibility.

Kelchner said the University is playing a waiting game right now. The administration is waiting for the decision of the governor and/or the Historical Commission.

He said the University is trying to be positive, and that there is more activity going on now than ever before.

Kelchner stressed that the University is doing everything in its power to reach a favorable decision regarding the status of North Hall.

Schofield Heads Fine Cast

by Michael Nolle

I have received some difficult assignments in my short tenure as a FLASHLIGHT staff member, and this one certainly qualifies for the top of the list. My assignment is to write a review for the student directed production, FEIFFER'S PEOPLE.

The difficulty lies in the fact that I must critique a dress rehearsal, and not an actual production. It's very hard to discuss what is funny when you are the only person in the audience who is there to laugh.

The other problem is that this play is made up of approximately 60 short sketches, and therefore cannot be critiqued in the same manner as STREET-CAR NAMED DESIRE, for example.

Still, I have an obligation to my faithful readers, so I must at least try to utilize my expertise in this area.

FEIFFER'S PEOPLE is composed entirely of short sketches, which average thirty seconds to five minutes in length. I tended to find that the longest sketches worked the best. The sketches ridiculed a wide variety of topics including the military, marriage, television, insecurity, sororities, and Superman.

Robert Schofield, Sara Kauffman, Guy McMullen, Julie Maxwell, and Michael Getz star in this compilation of scores by Jules Feiffer. The cast works well as an ensemble.

The actors play a number of different characters, and only three of these characters are featured in several skits. The continuing characters are Bernard, played by Bob Schofield; Huey, played by Guy McMullen; and the dancer, played by Sara Kauffman.

While it may have been Laurie Bowen's intention that no actor outshines the others, this is exactly what has transpired. (Although this is no fault of Student Director Bowen who directed the production quite well, allowing the actors the chance to improvise during rehearsals.) At any rate, Schofield is simply superb in all of his scenes. I would recommend seeing the show just for his performance alone.

Schofield, who has had prominent roles in CALIFORNIA

SUITE and THE MAT-CHMAKER, is perfect as the insecure Bernard. I feel any college-aged male will be able to relate to Bernard in some facet or another. Bernard has trouble dealing with girls, phone-message machines, drinking, and even his own name.

One of the funniest scenes in the entire production features Schofield as Harold Swerg, the best athlete in the world. Swerg does not find any challenge to sports and wants to be left alone in his job as a filing clerk. I won't divulge the rest of the scene or I will ruin the fun.

The remainder of the cast was very good. Sara Kauffman had the best scenes as a dancer, who placed a profound meaning on all of her dances. Her scenes are a great parody of those people who over emphasize the latent meaning of dances. When the entire cast joined her in a dance to 1984, I was in hysteria.

Guy McMullen did an adequate job as Huey, the obnoxious swinger. However, this character is not as endearing as Bernard. McMullen got on my nerves with his overacting in several scenes with Julie Maxwell, but easily redeemed himself as a Rod Serling look-alike in 'George's Moon.'

I felt 'George's Moon,' a story about a man who couldn't find any meaning to his life, was the best sketch in the play. Michael Getz, as George, made this sketch extremely funny.

Julie Maxwell, a senior at Mansfield High School, does a competent job throughout the show. She demonstrates a good range of emotions as well as a powerful stage presence.

The technical crew (Lance Benson, Margaret Mitchel, and Bob Archibald) did a good job in handling the many sound and light cues. They helped the play move along at a good rate.

The fact that the set consists of six boxes also helps to speed up the show. The actors utilize the boxes in many creative ways.

I feel that Bowen achieved her goal of producing a very funny comedy. This play will certainly entertain you. I give credit to everyone connected to the show for entertaining me for ninety minutes. I suggest you venture up to Allen Hall, and be prepared for an enjoyable evening.

The show will be presented tonight through Saturday at 8:00 p.m.

rock review

by Ed Cerny and Chris Graves

What do you get when you cross a disheveled synthesist with an alto wearing an orange crew-cut?

Answer: Eurhythmics! The formerly unknown duo, Dave Stewart and Annie Lennox, have catapulted their popularity to new heights.

Ever since their modest beginnings in the trio known as the Tourists, Dave and Annie have been shocking audiences with their look and innovative sound.

Since the success of "Sweet Dreams," the Eurhythmics have been expanding their horizons and improving their style.

The latest from the dynamic duo is the album TOUCH. Unlike SWEET DREAMS... which only produced one or two hits at the most, TOUCH may well produce four or more songs of outstanding quality.

Upon the release of the album in Australia, one song in particular immediately smashed onto the charts. "Right By Your Side" is unlike anything you would expect from the Eurhythmics.

From this song's fragmented beginning to its frenzied ending, the song grabs the listener with a Latin flair and lively tempo. The lyrics leave behind the deep emotional impact of the other tracks in favor of a festive and uplifting sound.

The other tracks, on the other hand, deal with the more serious subject of lost love.

"Here Comes The Rain Again" is a perfect example of this. From its surprisingly brilliant orchestration, the Eurhythmics have derived a song that conveys to the listener a strong sense of loneliness. With a clearly emotional foundation, Dave Stewart builds an unobtrusive accompaniment to Annie's haunting vocal.

The other outstanding track from this album is "Who's That Girl?". The Eurhythmics add their own touch to the subject of jealousy between lovers. In the hands of Dave Stewart, the song rakes on a driving and impelling quality similar to the "Sweet Dreams" sound. Annie weaves a soulful melody with her provocative voice around the lyrics: "The language of love slips from my lover's tongue/Cooler than ice cream and warmer than the sun."

Where these songs excel in harmony and orchestration, the other cuts tend to be a little too different. Dave seems to have taken experimental music past the tolerance of the average listener.

Songs such as "The First Cut" and "Paint a Rumour" are just plain weird. It takes some time to get used to the sound of these cuts.

We also feel that the song "No Fear, No Hate, No Pain" should be changed to "No Pain, No Brain, No Pulse." Dave, you should have left Jennifer underwater!

Despite these plunges into the experimental abyss, TOUCH is sure to start trends and open the minds of the American audience. We rate the Eurhythmics TOUCH a well deserved 8½.

This week's video is from the Australian group Real Life. The video from their song "Send Me An Angel" deals with the well-known story of Beauty and the Beast. The song and the video compliment each other with uncanny precision. The only drawback is that the faces of the group could make Helen Keller regurgitate her Quaker Oats.

As good as the song and video are, we fear that Real Life may be just a flash in the pan—here today, gone tomorrow. Despite this, we rate the song an 8 and the video from Real Life a 9, giving "Send Me An Angel" an 8½.

"Company" in Town

"Company" will open Thursday, March 1 and end with a matinee Sunday, March 4.

The plot revolves around Robert, a single man in New York, and five married couples who want him to settle down and "tie the knot," with one of his three girlfriends. As one wife tells Robert, "Marriage is easy. I've done it three times."

Throughout the show, we see the five different sets of relationships through Robert's eyes as he visits their apartments.

We also get a close-up view of marriage, and possibly some reasons Robert prefers bachelorhood.

This year's musical is a new direction for MU director Lawrence Knowles and set designer William Mellien who have impressed audiences with "Man of La Mancha" and "My Fair Lady."

The play was chosen as the result of a group discussion among Knowles, Mellien, Noel Schwartz, choreographer, and Carol Robison, musical director. "We take into consideration the music, choreography, the set and the challenge involved," Knowles says.

"The most important reason we chose this play is that we feel it's a musical the students and the audience can get excited about. It's fast moving and the music is lively and percussive," he said.

As with the past two musicals, the set will be complex and representational. "We'll use four levels, which will include five apartments, a nightclub and a park. As a director, I like to use a lot of levels to give me height and depth," Knowles explains.

The background will be the New York skyline reminding the audience that they are in the Big Apple.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Thursday-Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Fields at Steadman

Noted pianist Richard Fields will perform a piano recital, Sunday, February 19 at 3 p.m. in the Mansfield University Steadman Theatre. He will play selections from Beethoven, Bach, Liszt and Williams Grant Still.

Fields received international acclaim when he became a prize winner at the Viotti International Piano Competition.

He was the only American of 100 contestants to pass into the final round of the Italian competition.

When he made his debut with the San Francisco Symphony, the San Francisco Chronicle reported, "Fields is an uncommonly sensitive pianist with a big bronze-age technique and poetry to burn."

The Ford Foundation awarded him a Graduate Fellowship, and he has received scholarships from the Julliard School, the Whitten Foundation, Cal-State Alumni Association and others.

In addition to recital and orchestral appearances, Fields has numerous radio and television broadcasts to his credit.

He recently appeared as guest artist on the Teleprompter Manhattan Cable Television program "Keyboard Special."

He is currently a professor of music at West Chester University. Fields' appearance is sponsored by the Mansfield University Fine Arts Committee and the MU Human Relations Committee.

The recital is free and open to the public.

No Bridge for the Gap

by Christian L. Conning

Last week, maintenance personnel began tearing down the bridge which is attached to North Hall.

The bridge, like the psychology lab and the walkway which had been torn down, was condemned as unsafe.

The Board of Health stated that the bridge was a dangerous structure which was highly tempting to adventurous university students.

According to university officials, the buildings and walkway are merely additions to North Hall and not considered a part of North Hall. Therefore, the destruction of these structures does not necessarily mean that North Hall will also be torn down.

Change at the Kremlin

by Ann Marie Defina

Yuri V. Andropov, 69, President of the Soviet Union, died last Thursday, although the U.S. did not report the death until Friday.

The announcement of his death was accompanied by the statement that Andropov had been seriously ill with kidney and heart problems.

The former President had also been suffering from diabetes and had not been seen in public since an August 18 meeting with nine U.S. Democratic senators.

Andropov was buried Tuesday at Red Square in Lenin's tomb.

After the death of Leonid Brezhnev on November 10, 1982, Andropov became the leader of the nation of 280 million people.

During his short term Andropov led a nation locked in an escalating arms race with the United States and a country with a deeply troubled economy. He began a campaign to crack down on corruption and enhance labor discipline.

The first news of Andropov's death was announced in the U.S. when the French foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, told a meeting of European and Third World ministers that Andropov had died.

United States officials, who kept in mind the chilly climate of super power relations, reacted in a cautious manner to the news of Andropov's death.

A formal U.S. response to the death was made on February 10.

Despite calls on Capital Hill and on the presidential campaign trail for the vacationing Ronald Reagan to attend the funeral, Vice President George Bush laid a memorial wreath on Andropov's grave on Tuesday.

Washington officials have said that they did not think Andropov's death would cause any major shifts in Moscow's policy. However, Democrat W. Averell Harriman stated, "This is the time for caution and care in the conduct of our affairs with the Soviet Union as the nation undergoes the transition to new leadership."

Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle advised, "I wouldn't expect the Kremlin's military record to change at all. The Soviet general staff is pretty much in charge of military policy and that will continue."

ROTC News

by Cassie Williams

A historical event in the legacy of Mansfield ROTC took place February 7 in the Cabaret Room when the cadets presented their institutional flag and a plaque to Interim President Rod Kelchner.

This ceremony was the final stage in a three year process which began in the spring of 1981, when Daniel R. Stefanowich Jr. designed the coat of arms shown on the flag.

The coat of arms then went through a difficult approval system before finally being developed into a crest, patch and flag for display by Mansfield University ROTC personnel.

During the program, three cadets were acknowledged and presented the Distinguished Military Student (DMS) award by Kelchner.

This award is given to cadets who have distinguished themselves by demonstrating superior leadership traits and achievement in ROTC, as well as in campus and civic activities. The cadets who received this award are Karl Schwartz, Devin Schwartz, and Jeffrey Winkler. Recognition was given to the five two year and three year scholarship winners for 1983-84. The awarding of scholarships is based on the cadets academic achievement and participation in the ROTC program.

The cadets presented with two year scholarships are Kevin Davis and Stephanie Ebner. Three year scholarship winners are Robert Archibald, Anthony Gullotta, and Kathleen MacNamara.

On January 5, the Mansfield ROTC sent three cadets, the largest group in Mansfield history, to the US Army Airborne School at Fort Benning, Georgia.

On January 27, all three cadets returned to Mansfield with their wings. Cadets Anthony Gullotta, Grant Schanbacher and William Welfling were recognized and congratulated by Kelchner.

The Dedication Ceremony was followed by a social during which family, friends, students, and visiting military personnel had an opportunity to examine the new flag and congratulate the honored cadets.

GOOD LUCK

The Penny-Saver

by Pedro Rijo

Sports Editor's note: This week I would like to introduce our new Sports Columnist, Pedro Rijo, who has volunteered to replace me as columnist so I can devote more time to the coverage of our athletic teams.

Do you know who is the 11th rated team in NCAA Division II, and who will set a school record for most wins in a season?

Some of you do, but I'm afraid a lot of you don't know the answer.

For those of you who didn't answer the question correctly, the answer is the MU Men's Basketball Team.

I know why so few people knew the answer, because I attended a recent MU home game, and I bet there wasn't 200 people in attendance. BUT why so few? Is it too far to walk?

Come on, students, MU finally has a winner, and that is what you all want, but no one supports them. Why doesn't anyone attend home basketball games? Do you realize you get in free to see one of the best Division II basketball teams in the entire country? What's the problem?

With a team rated 11th in the nation it would seem you would be swinging from the rafters to see them play.

I understand they took a student bus to Bloomsburg, where the Mounties played the most important game of the season, and it wasn't full. I really would like to know why no one went to support the team.

OK, students, MU has four home games left this season, so do the team a favor and FILL Decker Gym for each game left. I promise you will see one of the best Division II basketball teams in the nation, when you watch your Mounties.

MU 68 Millersville 64

Paced by Nelson Tuitt's 20 points and eight rebounds, the Mounties downed Millersville 68-64 in a PSAC game.

Mansfield held a two-point lead at intermission, but Millersville came back to take a 53-51 lead with 11:52 remaining in the second half.

On Mansfield's next possession, Brian White hit a three-point play to give the lead back to the Mounties, and that ignited the Mounties, as they scored five unanswered points to end any hopes of a Millersville upset.

Gerard Conyers added 15 points for the Mounties.

MU 73 East Stroudsburg 68

Mansfield, the 11th ranked team in Division II nationally, won for the 17th time in their last 18 games, as they nipped East Stroudsburg 73-68.

Trailing 47-43, Stroudsburg's Ikey Dweek scored eight of his team's next 19 points to vault the visitors into the lead 56-52 with 10 minutes remaining.

With Stroudsburg still ahead in the final minute, 68-67, Mountie Craig Cooley connected on a pair of free throws, to put MU ahead for good.

MU 68 St. John Fisher 60

The Mounties used balanced scoring to draw within one victory of tying a school record for wins in a season, as they downed St. John Fisher.

Gerard Conyers led the way with 19 points, as the 11th ranked Mounties won their 19th game of the season.

The score was knotted at 55-55 with just under six minutes to play, but MU behind Conyers and Craig Cooley outscored St. John Fisher 13-5 to end Fisher's hopes of an upset.

Cooley and Brian White added 13 and 11 points respectively for the Mounties who played without the services of Nelson Tuitt, who was resting an injured knee.

Millersville 65 MU 52

Millersville, led by Shelley Bowie and Amy Gipprich, who combined for 35 points and 26 rebounds, downed the Lady Mounties 65-52.

Bowie, the sister of Kentucky's Sam Bowie, led the way with 20 points and 16 rebounds.

The Mounties, now 5-13, were led by Deb Schneider with 17 points and 13 rebounds, and Delores Stafford's 16 points.

East Stroudsburg 85 MU 70

A 24-point scoring performance by Mountie Delores Stafford went for naught, as the Ladies dropped an 85-70 decision to East Stroudsburg.

Stroudsburg took a 44-43 lead at intermission.

St. John Fisher 68 MU 44

Mary and Patricia Burmaster combined for 24 points to lead St. John Fisher to its win over the Lady Mounties.

Deb Schneider paced the Mounties with 16 points and hauled down 10 rebounds.

Heaven bound.

The Mansfield University Wrestling Team closed out its season with a 48-3 loss to Lycoming.

142-pounder Bob Johnson was the lone Mountie winner, as he narrowly defeated Jack Humphreys 8-7.

The Mounties finish the year at 4-13.

Heck Hath No Fury...

If there's one thing that bugs me more than people who won't get involved, it's people who won't get involved, but complain about things anyway. I'm sure anyone who's involved in an organization or committee knows what I'm talking about.

These are the people who are more than willing to tell you all the things you're doing wrong and just what they'd do differently if they were in your position. But do they ever show up for meetings or to help do any of the work or to help implement any of their "well-thought-out" improvements? Keep dreaming, Alice.

Don't get me wrong. I'm all for constructive criticism. I know I need all the help I can get. If I'm doing something wrong, or if something could be improved, I'm always willing to sit down and listen. I usually learn something, too. That isn't what bothers me.

What bothers me is the people who come waltzing into a classroom or into the office with all their gripes—they didn't like this story, that story should have had a better angle, that photograph wasn't as good as it should've been—you get my gist.

I'm constantly inviting such people to get involved with the paper. I offer to let them type, write, help with layout or photography. I invite them to our weekly staff meetings on Thursdays evenings at 7:30, but do they ever show up? No. And to top it all off, they have the audacity to come up to you later and say something like, "Well, I intended to come to the meeting on Thursday, but I couldn't make it." Let me tell you, you don't just stumble across the time to "make it" to meetings; you have to consciously make the time to go. People who occasionally pop in to spout off all their complaints don't carry too much weight with me.

I'm involved in a couple of other organizations on campus, and they face the same problems. People don't want to get involved. It gets a little discouraging after awhile. I'm sure other organizational leaders and members have felt the same type of frustration.

On the lighter side, I'd like to thank the few dedicated people who carry more than their share of the work, not only on the Flashlight, but in other organizations as well. Those are the people who make the difference.

There seems to be three different types of people: those who become actively involved; those who, although they cannot become actively involved, do show a genuine interest by giving as much support and praise, as well as constructive suggestions as possible; and those who complain and get in their digs, but aren't willing to get involved. I'll take the first two over the last one anytime.

There, I guess I'm finished. I feel better now. Have a good weekend.

Letters

Dear Mel and Campus:

The following is an opinion which I hope the entire campus will consider if the Strategic Planning Committee should reassign MU sports to Division III.

Is it true that colleges are for scholars? I'm sure the answer is "yes." I don't want to seem incredibly dull or completely against sports, but I think that any decision made at an EDUCATIONAL institution should be made in the best interest of those who are at that school to become educated.

In high schools and colleges I see too many hard-earned tax and tuition dollars being thrown away on sports programs that, in terms of long-range effects, are useless.

It does not make any sense to invest (or should I say waste) money on programs which do not pay a worthwhile return. How many people make supportive careers from sports? Not enough to justify the money spent on sports. Look at all the bucks spent for athletic facilities (Decker Gym, Rec Center, fields) on this campus. And how many students found professional careers as athletes? You can probably count them all on one finger.

And then the SPC talks about reducing the music program at MU. I sincerely urge them to reconsider, and I am not a music major—far from it.

Doesn't this school do enough other nonsensical things to distract students from their work that we could forfeit our Division II status? Besides, game attendance is poor for a campus this size.

LETTERS

If our scholars who are also athletes want to participate and/or watch sports, they can play in the Rec Center, Decker, or the fields, and they can watch from TV lounges (which, by the way, are broken and torn apart by these honorable athletes) in the dorms.

And while I'm ragging about wasted money, I want to cast a shadow on the new game room opening soon in Memorial. What's wrong, aren't the main game rooms in Memorial adequate? If your stereo is broken and you want to listen to music in this new game room, please remember that I and others like me are helping to pay for this nonsense.

I think this school wastes a lot of time inventing ways to waste money on worthless people who don't appreciate well-intended efforts.

MU officials are concerned about declining enrollment and trying to come up with more weekend activities to prevent "students" from transferring and to improve MU's reputation as the place to go to school. My advice to the administration is to lay off. This school has done more than enough to stimulate interest. Why not re-channel money wasted on foolishness into financial aid for people who really want to come to Mansfield but can't afford to?

As long as this is a college, why not build a reputation based on academic performance instead of athletic or partying performance? Don't try to be trendy, try to be enduring.

Truly Concerned

PS—Don't bother arguing with me, I know I'm right.

Editor's Note: The following is a memorandum sent to Dr. Raymond Paskvan on Feb. 9, 1984. The members of the Business, Economics, and Computer Science (BECS) sent me a copy and requested that it be printed.

The members of the Business, Economics and Computer Science Department are concerned with the Strategic Planning Committee's first draft. The consensus of the department members is that the Committee assumes BECS will have a declining enrollment. We find no basis for this assumption. Over the past six years departmental enrollment has increased rapidly and steadily. This growth in BECS has accounted for most of Mansfield's increase in enrollment during that period, but if the history of lack of support continues and proposed program division is implemented the Committee's prediction will be self-fulfilling. If the committee does not provide for encouragement and support to BECS, Mansfield will have declining enrollment and probably retrenchment.

To provide this encouragement and support we suggest the Committee:

1. Encourage the University community to perceive BECS as an integral part of Mansfield.
2. Recommend increased staffing in BECS to support the present programs properly.

3. Recommend that BECS be provided with a proper budget to search the positions needed.

4. Recommend provision for new departmental programs (Accounting, immediately; Finance, Managerial Economics and Marketing, later). These programs will continue to integrate Computer and Information Science in a unique way to enhance growth.

5. Encourage BECS to continue to recruit minority and non-traditional students: This is the best growth potential for the future.

6. Encourage provision of scholarships for BECS minority and non-traditional students.

7. Recommend more financial support for BECS student placement.

8. Recommend that BECS be provided with adequate physical facilities including a computer lab and/or classrooms.

9. Recommend placing the Academic Computer Coordinator within BECS.

The Department is distressed by the rural emphasis supported by the Committee. Such an emphasis does not enhance the image that students and potential employers have of colleges and universities in rural settings. In short, such an emphasis encourages stereotyping.

Dear Editor,

With three cafeterias, why does there have to be such a long line at meal time? This gets to be such a hassle, and if people are in a hurry to get to a class or an appointment, they either have to hurry like the devil or be late for their class, etc.

I went to the cafeteria the other night to meet some friends for dinner, and I arrived at 6:15, and finally at 6:35 I got through the serving line. You wonder why it took so long? Because everyone was coming back for seconds, thus holding up the entire line. With the third serving line open, the serving could be made much quicker and easier for all of us. Let's face it, we pay to come here, so shouldn't we deserve better service from the staff of MU?

Signed,
Hungry

P.S. I know you are doing a tough job, and I thank you for the service we already are receiving.

Rural Institute Created

by Michael Nolfie

Interim President Rod Kelchner announced the creation of a Rural Services Institute at Mansfield University at a press conference on Tuesday.

Kelchner outlined four basic objectives for a gathering of about 40 college officials, media representatives and area residents. They include:

—The collection and dissemination of information about the quality of life in rural areas and a study of the need for new or expanded rural programs and services.

—To apply the resources of MU to the various needs of the region, especially problems to rural areas.

—To provide a center where students can gain practical experience so they can better work

Safety Committee

by Dan Mason

As part of a contractual obligation to AFSCME, MU has set up a Safety Committee.

This committee's primary function is that of a collection point for information about safety, hazards and violations on MU's campus.

After collecting the pertinent information, the staff will notify the malefactors for reparations.

A spokesperson for the committee stated that it seems that at MU, as at everywhere else, people would rather "store" their "valuable educational materials" than throw away obsolete literature and trash.

The majority of safety complaints, thus far, have been along this line. Some maintenance problems which have been noted are being taken care of.

The committee consists of Jerry Kokstovick, President, representing AFSCME; Jackie West, Secretary, representing the staff at MU; Kip Griffin, representing Maintenance; Horace Higley, representing

Dr. J. Dennis Murray, a psychology professor, has been named coordinator of the institute. Murray has researched and published several articles on mental health in rural areas.

Kelchner, Paskvan Discuss Report

by Michael Nolfie

Interim President Rod Kelchner held an open informational meeting about the Strategic Planning Report on Tuesday in Manser. The meeting consisted of a question-and-answer period and included a general discussion about the report.

Only a few students and one member of the administration attended the session. Students and ADRL Dave Fried asked questions covering the business program, art program, faculty retraining, mid-term grades, and athletics.

Although Kelchner answered all the questions, very little new information was elicited.

Because the Interim President has not yet officially received the report, he could not comment on several areas.

When questioned about the motivation behind specific recommendations regarding the art department, Kelchner could only offer educated guesses.

There was a rather lengthy discussion regarding mid-term grades. Kelchner revealed that he has heard that student opinion favors keeping mid-term grades.

He added, "Maybe the best thing that happened with the recommendation is that it alerted us to a situation that needed to be discussed."

The recommendations which cover the athletic program were discussed at the open meeting.

Kelchner said the situation consists of a lack of getting adequate staff personnel and dollars versus staying in the conference and the impact Division II status has on Mansfield's public relations and admission program.

Kelchner said that of the responses he has received, the majority support keeping our athletic program, stating "it's not even close."

In a related, but separate, interview, the FLASHLIGHT discovered that Dr. Ray Paskvan, co-chairman of the Strategic Planning Report, has received over 35 responses to the report.

The responses from students, faculty, academic departments, and student organizations cover a wide variety of topics. However, a recurring theme is the athletic program. Paskvan confirmed that the vast majority of the responses recommend staying in Division II and the conference.

Paskvan said that the committee has only met once to review the responses. Because of the great number of responses the committee will not submit thereport to Kelchner as early as first anticipated. The committee hopes to officially hand Kelchner the report by early March.

He stressed that the committee needs time to seriously consider all of the responses.

While the committee does not have the power to implement the recommendations, they can revise the report before they give it to Kelchner.

The co-chairman of the committee stated there is a possibility that the report will be altered before it is passed along to Kelchner. Paskvan conceded that responses regarding athletics, the art program, and mid-term grades could feasibly cause the committee to revise the report.

Any part of the report may be changed by the committee before it becomes official, but the FLASHLIGHT highlights the aforementioned three because a fair amount of responses challenge the original recommendations.

Paskvan said the committee will carefully consider all of the responses in all of their remaining meetings.

Lisney's Last Hurrah

by Michael Nolfie

"I think you can safely say this will be the last coffeehouse I do at Mansfield, ever again," said Mark Lisney.

The well known campus musician will present his final coffeehouse performance tonight at 9 p.m. in the lobby of Pinecrest.

Tonight's coffeehouse will be a reunion of sorts. It will reunite Lisney with Chuck Isley and Ron Simasek, who were featured in last semester's show. Isley will be on bass, and Simasek on drums and vibes.

Lisney said this is probably the last time he will perform with Isley and Simasek. He describes them as very easy to work with and extremely competent.

This semester's coffeehouse differs from previous performances because the entire show will be basically very mellow. There will only be three noisy up-tempo numbers. One of these will be the old Elton John classic, "Benny and the Jets."

Other featured songs and artists include: "Guess Why They Call It the Blues," by Elton John; "Captain Jack," by Billy Joel; a Beatles medley; and two Lisney originals, "You're Gone" and "Game of Lies."

Since this show is not in the Cabaret, there won't be any special lighting effects. For the first time at a coffeehouse, Lisney will be able to see his entire audience (and not just the front two rows). He hopes this will allow him to interact better with his audience.

Musically, the show differs from previous performances because it does not feature a guitar, but does highlight vibes. Simasek is very anxious to play not only the drums, but also to demonstrate his expertise with the vibes.

Lisney did not plan on doing a coffeehouse this semester, because he has a full class schedule. However, he changed his mind because of three important factors: the chance to work with Isley and Simasek again; the huge success of last semester's coffeehouse—with a standing-room-only crowd in the Cabaret Room; and because performing is a much needed outlet for him.

Lisney stressed that this show consists of mostly mellow music. He said, "it's perfect for people who just want to relax and forget their problems for awhile."

Lisney has started to seriously consider his future. He is a Special Education major, who hopes to pursue a career in teaching emotionally disturbed children, or possibly work as a supervisor at an institution. He has no plans for a career in

by Ed Cerny and Chris Graves

Three years ago, Yes released their last album and vanished from the public eye. During that time, the group went through many changes, including the departure of Jon Anderson to Asia. After Jon left, the remaining members decided to reform a new group called Cinema. This plan fell through, however, when Jon Anderson returned. Now, Yes has made a triumphant comeback to the music scene with their latest album, 90125.

If you have only heard their first hit from this album, "Owner of a Lonely Heart," you might think that Yes has changed their style, but upon closer inspection of the entire album, it will soon become evident that Yes has retained their original sound. So much so, however, that at times it even verges on redundancy.

Yes Seems to be taking their old style and trying to fit it into a contemporary mold, like a square peg in a round hole. The Yes brand of musicality is very complex; sometimes too complex for the average listener. Each member plays as a soloist instead of as part of a group, causing the sound to be heavy and overloaded. Many people will argue that this is the style of the group, but we feel that if this is true, then Yes has not grown with the times.

There are, on the other hand, some excellent redeeming aspects. Songs such as "It Can Happen" and "Leave It" have exciting and imaginative vocals and instrumentation that show off Yes's capacity for versatility. Where Jon Anderson shines as a vocalist, Chris Squire outdoes himself on bass guitar. His unique technique is reminiscent of his solo album FISH OUT OF WATER.

The overall album is intricate, sophisticated, and put together well. We hope Yes will continue their output towards a bright future. We rate 90125 a 7½.

This week's video is "Backstabber" by the group Hytes. Rejoice, all of you Alfred Hitchcock fans. For those of you who can't get enough of Norman Bates and his congenial room service, then this video is for you.

It's a wild romp through Hitchcock's PSYCHO complete with this year's winner of the Janet Leigh Look-a-like Contest. From the camera angles to the subtle shadows, Hytes takes these and adds their own touch of humour. The famous profile of Hitchcock, only this time with an electric guitar, is what caught our eye.

The entire video is not meant to ridicule, but to summarize and satirize the obsession we have with horror. It is tastfully done and executed right up to the climax of the lead singer spinning the chair around to find, not Norman's mother, but the Master of Suspense himself. We rate the song a 6, the video an 8, giving "Backstabber," by Hytes, a 7.

Dear Nolfie

by Michael Nolfie

Dear Nolfie:

In lieu of the recent holiday (Valentine's Day) I was wondering if you could help me with a little problem.

I have recently had the pleasure (?) of meeting (off-handedly) a beautiful redhead. Beware, this girl is a criminal...she has stolen my heart! Herein lies my problem...How do I approach this thief and get my ticker back?

Speaking of thieves; how do I tell a friend that a book that I borrowed from him was stolen in Manser the other day?

Watching in 1984
Uncle Adolph

Dear Adolph,

I really don't think there is any hope for you. I believe I am acquainted with the redhead you refer to, and sadly, must inform you that she has many gentlemen onlookers. (Recent statistics show that 92.7 percent of all MU males crave this heavenly creature).

But being DEAR NOLFEE means I must make a serious attempt to solve your problem. Therefore I've consulted an expert in the field of women, Dean Joseph Maresco. The well-known stud replied, "Go for it, buddy, the worst thing that can happen is the wench turns you down, and you get drunk to forget her." Maresco said this is what he has been doing for years, and refers to it as his "rejection and booze" theory. He added, "It sure as hell beats sending her flowers."

As for your other problem, I've taken care of it. I went over to the Registrar's office, and simply signed an anonymous drop card for your friend. Now he doesn't have to worry about the book, and he'll have more free time on Mon., Wed., and Friday.

Dear Nolfie,

Why don't people like me? Four of my last five years were spent at Mansfield University, and nobody liked me there. Now I'm at another city in south-central Pennsylvania, and everyone hates me here, too. All I did was relieve 22 over-worked employees at my previous job. Other than that I never caused anyone any pain as I never let the public see me. I don't understand it.

Please Nolfie, advise me on what I can do to improve my popularity among the populace.

Hugs and Kisses,
Mrs. Sanders

Dear Mrs. Sanders,

The colonel is really rolling over in his grave on this one. I think you really need help, especially since I've heard rumors you are being axed.

I really don't know why everyone hates you. After all, I feel you did for Mansfield what James Watt did for the environment.

I called upon an expert in the Speech department, and this prominent instructor feels may need a course in Interpersonal Communication, since you have trouble engaging in a conversation with anyone out of elementary school.

My personal opinion is that you should consider a second career as a waitress (but don't expect big backs in tips) I'm sending you a copy of my new book, "I'm OK, You're a Jerk."

P.S. I'm including a list of Dale Carnegie schools in your area. Good luck.

Dear Nolfie,

I had a serious problem this weekend when an old friend came to visit me. It doesn't sound like a problem, take him to a few parties and show him the usual Mansfield good time. Well, my friend (I'll call him Fred) had a few too many and while we were visiting some friends, he was accosted by a female acquaintance of mine. Well, I managed to save what was left of his virginity, but I am wondering if I did the right thing. Although Fred, after seeing his attacker in the light of day, is eternally grateful, my female acquaintance says I was impolite in disturbing them. Was I wrong in protecting my friend's innocence?

Confused but Not Used

Dear Confused,

I'm sorry to hear about the dilemma your friend Fred was in over the weekend. Let me congratulate you on your bravery; it must have taken a strong-willed man to rescue Fred from a fate worse than death. I don't think you did the wrong thing protecting Fred's innocence. That particular virtue is very rare indeed at MU.

If your friend has trouble dealing with his virginity, he can contact the local VA chapter—Virgins Anonymous. (I'd give you the number myself, but I lost it in Laurel a few semesters back).

At any rate, I think a more serious problem is your protection from his attacker. I urge you to stay in hiding and start lifting weights.

rural areas, but they are generally overlooked by government and social agencies.

The populations of rural areas in Pennsylvania are increasing steadily, Murray said. This is a factor which makes the Rural Services Institute very appropriate.

According to the 1980 census, Pennsylvania has the largest rural population in the country—38 million persons.

Murray listed several reasons why Mansfield University should play a role in serving the rural areas. They include: past and present growth of rural areas, a rural renaissance, and the fact the rural areas are underserved.

Dr. Murray listed specific objectives. They are:

—Study the quality of rural life and how it is affected by the action of government, business and industry, social services agencies, and educational institutes.

—Study barriers to effective services and community development in rural areas.

—Serve as a center for information dissemination.

—Increase community awareness of what MU has to offer the rural community.

—Contact community groups to deliver specific services.

—Support rural studies programs at the undergraduate and graduate levels.

—Welcome a center for rural folklore.

—Evaluate all of the activities of the Institute to help other people to do similar things in other parts of the Commonwealth and the country.

Initially, the institute will serve Tioga, Potter, Bradford and Sullivan Counties, but there are plans to expand into surrounding areas of Pennsylvania and New York.

The Rural Studies institute will temporarily housed in South Hall, where it can work closely with the Guideline telephone referral services.

"The University has made a commitment to support the Institute," Murray said. He added that the Institute will seek grants, private foundations, public contracts, and other services to help with funding.

There will be several local agencies linked to the Institute. This list includes: county government, Guideline, North Penn Comprehensive Health Services, Area Agency on Aging, mental health and mental retardation programs, drug and alcohol agencies, school districts, various state departments, and the Pennsylvania Rural Coalition.

The institute will utilize many MU academic departments and a large number of faculty members, as well as area residents who possess special skills.

Murray said that it is not an initial priority to create a Rural Service major, but instead to employ the talents of students from a number of departments, including English (folklore) and anthropology.

Some of the programs of the Institute are already underway, and will be pursued in the immediate future. Currently, Dr. Murray is conducting a needs assessment of the agricultural community.

Other projects under way include a job training program in computer software, involvement in a women's equity program, an adult basic education program in satellite countries.

The Institute's next advisory committee meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, March 20.

The advisory board will oversee the activities of the Rural Services Institute. Members of the committee are: Tioga County Commissioner O. Richard Bartlett; Richard E. Finley, MU dean of development and external relations; Potter County Commissioner Thomas Bowman; Sandra Linck, chairwoman of the MU Home Economics Department; Kenneth A. Meyer, an associate professor of biology at MU; Laurance W. Miller, chairman of the Department of Sociology, Social Work, and Criminal Justice; Alonzo Thomas, a community leader and retired farmer from the Troy area; Kathy Worthington, Sullivan County extension home economist, and acting MU Provost George H. Mullen, an ex-officio member.

Professor Published

by Ann Marie Defino

Dr. Edward S. Ryan, a professor in the Criminal Justice Department, is one of the latest members of Mansfield University's faculty to have a book published.

Ryan is the author of A MultiDimensional Analysis of Conflict in the Criminal Justice System.

The 331-page book deals with the interaction between the police and probation officers and the conflicts that occur.

The book took Ryan five years to write. He used data that he himself gathered in California, New Mexico, and New York.

Ryan, who has always had an interest in analysis and conflict, decided to write the book to show that analysis and conflict cannot be studied from only one perspective.

Age, ethnicity, religion and educational status were some of the attitudinal discrepancies cited by Ryan. However, in his book, he proved that age and ethnicity were the only two variables which had a real effect.

The book outlines Ryan's perceptual conflict formulation which he uses to measure group and personal interactions.

The book is a specialized study, not a generalized textbook.

His formulation, says Ryan, could be used in application on groups outside the criminal justice field.

This is not Dr. Ryan's first book. In 1969, he co-authored a book as a graduate student that laid the groundwork for his current book.

Ryan is currently thinking of starting work on a book that will deal with the mental processes associated with crime.

Swim Team Ends Season

by Bob Kakareka

Last Thursday, the MU Women's Swim Team finished their season with a bang by defeating Alfred U 73-57 at home. The team was lead to victory by the two freshmen sensations Beth Schelter and Mary Schultz as they both took first places in each of their four events.

Other fine performances were turned in by Kathy Choate (2 1sts, 2nd), Jill Koloski (2 1sts), Dana Bass (1st, 2nd, 3rd), Linda Schramm (1st, 2 2nds, 3rd), Kim Bolig (1st, 3rd), Lisa Sirotka (1st, 3rd), Clarie Sabourin (2nd, 2 3rds), Esther Kennedy (2nd, 2 3rds), and Jo McLain (3rd).

Other girls rounding out the team were Michelle Smolock, Kathy Smiley, Phyllis Luce, Dianne Grassetti, Barbie Munsell, and Dalisa Keltz.

This win was very important to the team since it was the second win of the season, and the team hasn't won two meets in one season in about 10 years.

It is also suspected that without the losses of sprinter Darcy Traenor, national diving semifinalist Colena Hammond, and distance swimmer Gretchen Dennison between semesters, the team would have ended up winning at least half of their meets.

In addition to those losses, senior diver Dana Bass and senior distance swimmer Claire Sabourin were unable to practice this semester due to student teaching, but still were able to compete in the meets.

Overall during the season, freshman backstroker/sprinter Beth Schelter contributed the most to the team by scoring 94 points with 14 first places and 7 second places.

Right behind her was her high school counterpart, freshman breaststroker Mary Schultz, scoring 90 points with 12 first places and 2 second places. These two girls together scored over half of the total team points.

Next in line on the team was senior diver Dana Bass who finished the season with 4 firsts and 8 second places. Dana also qualified for the National Diving Championships in the last meet of her college swimming career.

Other high scorers for the team were sprinter Darcy Traenor (5 1sts, 5 3rds in 1 semester), diver Colena Hammond (7 1sts in 1 semester), breaststroker Linda Schramm (1st, 7 2nds, 5 3rds), and distance swimmer Claire Sabourin (2 1sts, 5 2nds, 4 3rds).

Other highlights of the season include the return of sprinter Kathy Choate after 1½ years absence from the swim team and also the amazing amount of improvement in freshman divers Michelle Smolock and Kathy Smiley, both of whom had never dove before.

Starting from scratch, these two girls have successfully learned 11 different dives and Michelle has scored as much as a 7 on one of her dives. The coaching staff has been stunned with the amount of progress these two girls have made.

The Mansfield Mounties were upset last night by visiting Millersville.

The final score 63-58, was affected by Mansfield's line shooting. A total of 14 points were missed.

Mansfield's best scorer was Craig Cooley, who scored a total of 20 points for the Mounties.

The Mounties finished the regular season with a record of 21 wins, 5 losses. This is the best record in Mansfield's history.

Mansfield finished with a 10-4 record in the eastern division of the Pa. conference, and were ranked 9th in the latest NCAA Division II poll.

Mansfield will now host two playoff games, the first Monday night against Shippensburg. The Mounties will play at 7:30 in Decker Gym.

Should the Mounties win this game, they will play the winner of the Millersville-Kutztown matchup, Wednesday.

as the Mounties won for the 20th time in 24 games, tying a school record for most wins in a season.

The 1960-61 and '64-65 Mansfield squads both had 20-win seasons.

In an earlier game this season, Green ripped Mansfield for 42 points. But strong man-to-man defense by Venning limited Green to just one basket in the first half.

Craig Cooley paced the Mansfield scoring parade with 21 points, followed by Allan Spicer with 18.

Gerard Conyers chipped in 16 Mansfield points and teammate Nelson Tuitt added 15.

No. 9

The Mounties, ranked No. 9 nationally among Division II teams, improved their overall record to 21-4 with the hard-fought victory.

Veteran center Nelson Tuitt clinched the victory with a pair of free throws with 13 seconds left which gave the Mounties a 58-54 lead. Trenton Tate scored for EC with three seconds left, and when Steve Rincavage intercepted the inbounds pass, the Eagles had a chance. But Tate's 35-foot desperation shot was both short and late, coming after the final horn.

In the women's game, much smaller EC stayed with Mansfield for most of the game before the Mounties pulled away behind the sizzling shooting of Karen Eyster for a 55-40 triumph.

The men's game was a nail-biter all the way, with neither team leading by more than four points, with the exception of Mansfield's brief 14-9 bulge.

The Eagles, who earlier lost to Mansfield, 58-57, in overtime, battled the Mounties almost even on the backboards—26 rebounds to 28—and behind the shooting of John Roden and Tate, plus the inside play of Tate and Kenny Taylor, led by two-to-four points for most of the second half.

But a 10-2 spurt gave the Mounties a 46-42 lead that EC couldn't overcome.

Over in the Mansfield dressing room, the celebration for the Mounties' school-record 21st victory was subdued. Veteran coach Ed Wislon commented on his team's play.

"We have conference (Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference) playoffs coming up, the possibility of an NCAA (Tournament bid)," Wilson said, "and we just weren't motivated tonight, and Elmira played well."

The more-balanced Mansfield attack was led by Chris Venning and Conyers with 16 and 10 points respectively.

Elmira shot 49 percent from the field, Mansfield 45 percent.

The EC women used strong defense to stay close with Mansfield until the final three minutes.

Eyster canned three straight down the stretch, including two bombs from the top of the key, and also hit five late free throws for 11 points.

Guard Leslie Nicotera and center Debbie Schneider led the 8-16 Mounties with 16 and 14 points respectively.

Get It Right This Time

I'm going to address my editorial this week to an issue that I also addressed last semester, but which seems to have been forgotten over the past few months. I'll explain this one more time, and then I PROMISE I'll never mention it again.

Recently, I have been approached by several campus organizations. They have been asking one of two questions (or both): 1) Why does the Flashlight follow the policy for Random Notes that it adopted last semester? and 2) Why can't there be special columns for the individual campus organizations?

First I want to address the Random Notes policy. The Flashlight has two columns—the Random Notes (or Notices) column and the Classified Ads column. The Classifieds column is for congratulations, happy birthdays, good lucks, help wanteds, personal messages, etc. The cost of a classified ad is 25 cents per line. The Random Notes column is for information that is of interest to the students—such as meeting notices, organizational news, and lost and found articles. There is no charge for notices; we provide this space as a public service.

It may seem ridiculous that we don't print happy birthdays, engagement congratulations, good lucks, etc. in the Random Notes section. It seems that these would not take up very much room. However, you would not believe the number of such messages we get in each notice. It's incredible. I'm talking about several paragraphs. It isn't as bad as it used to be because there are many organizations who follow our policy and don't include those types of messages in their notices anymore. I appreciate their cooperation greatly.

Another reason for this policy is that the typing of notices is very time consuming. We have about three people who type, and I usually spend from three to four nights a week typing. That's not including the work the other typists do. It is very time consuming to have to type all the personal messages that appear in notices. I know, I did it during the last academic year.

The third reason is the cost. One foot of the least expensive photographic paper that we use in our typesetter costs approximately $3—that's for one foot. We provide ample space for any personal messages in the Classifieds section. Twenty-five cents is a reasonable fee. It's neither practical nor economical for us to print them in the Random Notes column.

Okay, on to the question about special columns for campus organizations. There is a total of at least 70 organizations on this campus. You can see how ludicrous it would be to try to give each one its own column; there'd be virtually no space left for news. It wouldn't work even on a rotating basis. Some organization would undoubtedly be left out, and that would result in bad feelings.

The information most of these organizations want printed fits into a notice. Of course, a notice is occasionally lost in the shuffle or gets buried and isn't published. We're only human, and we make mistakes. I think our overall record is pretty good, though. Most people understand when we make errors. And I'm ALWAYS telling people they're more than welcome to come up and work with the rest of us on Wednesday nights from 5:30 p.m. to 3:00 a.m.

If an organization is sponsoring a special event that would be of special interest to the students, feel free to offer it as a possible story. Or have someone in the organization write a story about the event. If we have room, we'll edit it and print it. We're always looking for suggestions for stories. This is not to say that every story submitted for publication will be printed, but we're always open to suggestions.

I hope I have cleared up any questions you may have had about our Random Notes policy. Most people understand our policy, and we appreciate their understanding and cooperation. This editorial is not directed at any particular organization; as I said, I have been approached by several. We appreciate those who understand and abide by this policy.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the letter in the Feb. 16 issue of the Flashlight which was signed 'Truly Concerned'. In the article, Truly Concerned (T.C.) felt that the money spent on the athletic program and on the new game room in Memorial Hall was or is wasted. We would like to argue these points.

First, we would like to comment on T.C.'s P.S. which read "Don't bother arguing with me, I know I'm right." When T.C. wrote that, we lost all respect for his letter. Maybe if T.C. ever writes another letter to the editor, maybe he or she will stop and think before adding that statement because not everyone will feel the same way about it, thus, not making him/her right in their eyes.

Second, we would like to comment on T.C.'s statements regarding the athletic program. T.C. asks this question: "How many people make supportive careers from sports?" T.C. says that there is "not enough to justify the money spent on sports." If it's not justified, then where are we going to get people qualified to teach Physical Education in our high schools or to get people qualified to become trainers for those people who do go on to become professional athletes? T.C. then asks, "How many students have found professional careers as athletes?" He then answers it by "you can probably count them all on one finger." Several past Mansfield Baseball stars have gone on to play professional baseball. One of which is currently playing for the Detroit Tigers. We suppose that T.C. is also complaining about the Baseball team's trip to Florida. But just for the record, the money for the trip is raised completely by the Baseball Team. He also says that if the athletes want to participate in sports that they can play in the Rec. Center, Decker, or on the fields. Where else do they play, in the dorms? Also, he says that if the athletes want to watch sports, they can watch them in the TV lounges in the dorms "which by the way, are broken and torn apart by these honorable athletes." We feel that it is not fair to put the blame on just the athletes. After all, there are other people who use those TV lounges.

Thirdly, we would like to comment on his statements about the new game room in Memorial Hall. He asks whether the existing game rooms are adequate. We feel that it's not that the existing game rooms aren't adequate, but that the reason for the new one is that not everyone is into the video games or ping-pong or pool, some of us would like to be able to go somewhere to play backgammon or chess or to just listen to music. T.C. seems to think that when someone's stereo breaks down that they'll be there listening. Sure, that may happen, but what about those who commute? After all, commuters do like to listen to music, too. Please be advised that not everyone lives in the dorms. Also, we are paying just as much as you are for the new game room.

Lastly, we would like to comment on some other of T.C.'s Comments. T.C. says that "He thinks this school wastes a lot of time inventing ways to waste money on worthless people who don't appreciate well-intended efforts." Apparently, T.C. has a lot to learn because people are not worthless. Everyone has something that they can contribute. He also says that "MU officials are concerned about declining enrollment and are trying to come up with more weekend activities to prevent students from transferring and to improve MU's reputation as the place to go to college. He also tells "the administration to lay off" and says that "the school has done more than enough to stimulate interest." We feel that without the weekend activities that more people would transfer, and the enrollment could drop even more. Without the weekend activities, there would be almost nothing to do. So our advice to the administration is to keep coming up with the weekend activities. We feel to get more people to come here, we have to do more than to just stimulate their interest. We need to have something for them to do while they're here. He also asks if this school "doesn't do enough other nonsensical things to distract students from their work." We would like to ask him, what other things does he feel are nonsensical? He also asks that "since this is a college, why not build a reputation based on academic performance?" First of all, Mansfield is a University not a college. Secondly, Mansfield has a good reputation academically. Many Mansfield graduates have gotten well-paying jobs in leadership positions, have gone on to medical school and graduate schools and have done very well. Also, if Mansfield didn't do well academically then we (Mansfield) wouldn't have been ranked 3rd out of the 14 state-owned universities in the latest Gourman Report.

We hope that maybe next time, T.C. will think a little more openly before writing or speaking about a subject that he is not an expert on.

Sincerely,

Two students who are not athletes that are proud to be at Mansfield

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I've just arrived back from a workout in Decker Gym's weightroom. I'm burning...not from the physical exercise...but from some of the ignorant comments and gestures made, towards me, indirectly about women in the weightroom. Remarks such as "They belong in the kitchen..." and "First they try to take our jobs and now the gym."

Hey Guys—I should think you would be thankful the women of the 80's are concerned about physical fitness. I am sure Rachel McLish "Miss Olympia" did not start her program to become a "Bulging Beauty" nor to compete with you men (for there is NO competition) but to gain endurance, strength, form, and tone.

Editor's Note: The following is a letter addressed to President Kelchner which was submitted to me for publication.

President Kelchner,

I am writing this letter in support of Fred Borda's letter which you received a few weeks ago. Like Mr. Borda, I was scheduled in an Accounting II class which was cancelled and was forced to accept a 3 hour class on Monday night with three separate instructors during the course of this semester. I have been "dumped" in a class with no extra seats. My instructor knows very few of the names of the people in the class, through no fault of his. He sees us only once a week. I never had any intentions to take a 3 hour course, especially with three separate people. Can you imagine trying to learn three styles of instruction in the same class over the length of one semester? I sympathize with the problems of the administration and with the business department. I spoke with my advisor and an instructor I had last semester. They urged me to write a letter and make known the necessity for change in this area of Mansfield's curriculum. Mr. Borda stated his intention to transfer after two more semesters here. I, on the other hand, have started procedures to transfer to another institution. If problems such as this one are attended to, I would seriously consider returning to MU.

Mr. Borda and I are not the only two students on campus who hold this position. A visible attempt to correct these problems would greatly improve MU's image as a serious educational institution.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,
Marcella A. Thomas

Since there are only a handful of women bodybuilders, this leaves us with no other choice of workout partners but men. I admit you inspire me to work as hard as I can. Honestly, there have been more times when a guy has assisted me or corrected an improper lift, and I thank them for this aid.

All I ask for is a little respect because we have now discovered your secret to a great physical exercise, stress release, and ego builder. I think a good gym ought to welcome serious bodybuilders—male or female—and take a serious stance toward the people who just make a nuisance of themselves.

"Female Bodybuilding is the shape of things to come."

A Novice,
Ted Kistler

Voter Registration Drive

by Christina Conning
Professor John Dowling of the Physics Department is conducting a Voter Registration Drive at Mansfield University.

According to Dowling, the purpose of this drive is to get college students involved in the election process, thus enabling them to become more politically aware.

Students who register during the Voter Registration Drive will be registering as residents of Mansfield.

Dowling stated that the drive will begin on March 5th and will end on March 6th. The times available to register are from 11:30 to 1:00, and 4:30 to 6:30 in lower Manser.

Dr. Dowling stated that anyone who has questions, or who is interested in volunteering time to the drive, should contact him at 4275, or stop in at his office in Grant Science Center.

Action Against Apathy

by Michael Nolle

"Most people agree there is a problem; otherwise we wouldn't be here." Connie Terry, president of Mansfield Activities Council stated.

Terry was referring to the subject of apathy, the topic of a meeting directed by Mr. Michael Lemasters, director of Residence Life.

The two main objectives of the meeting, which was held last Thursday, Feb. 23, were: 1) to decide if there is a problem of decreased student involvement on campus, and 2) if a problem exists, to plan steps to rectify it.

Many student organizations were represented at the meeting. The majority of the group, consisting of over 30 members, readily agreed with Ms. Terry that apathy is definitely a problem on campus.

The group consisted of members and representatives from several campus organizations.

Some of the major problems discussed were: lack of communication and coordination among the organizations, lack of money, lack of student incentive, bad timing of events, and ineffective publicity methods.

Lemasters outlined a few preliminary ideas for solutions. This list includes: providing a combination calendar/handbook, producing a ten-day or bi-monthly activity calendar, distributing interest surveys to all incoming freshmen, and improving the activity fair.

Members from SGA, MAC, WNTS, FLASHLIGHT, Black Student Union, and All Residence Hall Council appeared on behalf of their organizations. All of the dorm councils also sent representatives. Other clubs and groups also attended the meeting.

A second meeting of this needs-assessment organization is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Thursday, March 1.

Mounties to go to Semi's in Hershey

by Michael Nolle

The Mountie Basketball team is on its way to Hershey and the final tour of the Pennsylvania Conference Championships with its spirited 88-59, come-from-behind victory over Millersville at Decker Gym

Wednesday night.

Avenging a tough loss to Millersville just last Wednesday, Mansfield shot a sizzling 53 percent from the field and hit 87 percent of its free throws to nail down the win and a berth in Friday's semifinals at the Hershey Arena. The Mounties will face Clarion University, a 78-71 winner over California last night, in a 3 PM contest. Should MU win that one, it would go after the conference title at 8 PM day's semifinals at the Hershey Arena. The Mounties will face Clarion University, a 78-71 winner over California last night, in a 3 PM contest. Should MU win that one, it would go after the conference title at 8 PM a barrage of toilet paper from exuberant fans stopped the game for several minutes. Then the Mounties went to work, and deadlocked the score at 28-28 at the half on a last-second jump shot by Venning.

Millersville jumped ahead 35-32 early in the second half but 10 straight Mountie points, including four Craig Cooley free throws on technicals against Millersville Coach John Kochan put MU ahead for good. The Marauders charged late to pull within three at 59-56, but Mansfield countered with six unanswered points to put the game on ice and send the near capacity crowd into a frenzy.

Venning led the Mounties in scoring with 21 points. Three others hit double figures for MU, Saturday.

The win over Millersville was not easy. The sky high Mounties spotted the Marauders a 9-0 lead after the first three minutes before getting untracked. When Chris Venning's layup finally got Mansfield on the scoreboard, Cooley with 13, Nelson Tuitt with 12 and Gerard Conyers with 10.

The Mounties are now 23-5 and are ranked 10th in the nation in the latest NCAA Division II poll.

Jackson Sets Record

by Michael Nelfe

Michael Jackson won a record eight grammy awards, including album of the year for THRILLER on Tuesday in Los Angeles.

The 25-year old superstar's hit song "Beat It" was named single of the year. Jackson also took six other awards, including pop vocalist.

Jackson shared producer of the year honors with Quincy Hones for THRILLER. He also shared honors with Jones for THRILLER. He also shared honors with Jones again in the children's recording category for ET—THE EXTRATERRESTRIAL.

"Of all the awards I've won, I'm most proud of this one," Jackson said in accepting the "ET" award.

In a pre-broadcast ceremony, Jackson picked up three awards—rock male vocal, rhythm and blues male vocal, and R&B song.

"Beat It" picked up the rock award and "Billie Jean" scored the R&B prizes for Jackson. Both were No. 1 hits from the 25-million selling album, THRILLER.

Sting and the British rock band The Police captured four prizes including best group rock performance for the LP "Synchronicity."

Sting won new song of the year for writing "Every Breath You Take" and best rock instrumental for the title track to "Brimstone and Treacle."

The Police took best group vocal honors for "Every Breath You Take."

In other awards, Culture club won the best new artist prize. The British group is led by Boy George.

Boy George did not attend the ceremonies in Los Angeles, but did appear on the awards show via satellite hook-up from London.

"You've got taste, style, and you know a good drag queen when you see one," Boy George stated in a special thank you speech via satellite.

Other top winners include: Pat Benatar, pop female rock performer; Duran Duran, best video album; Anne Murray, best country female singer; Lee Greenwood, best male country singer; and Alabama, best country group.

Center Receives Grant

The Samuel L. Clemens Performing Arts Center is happy to announce that it has received notification from the National Endowment for the Arts, which was confirmed on February 21 through the office of Congressman Stan Lundine, that a $ 12,000 Inter-Arts Program grant from the NEA has been awarded to the Center.

Robison and Company

by D. Craig Banyai
and John Wommer

Carol Robison is the new musical director for this season's production, COMPANY. She replaces Jack Wilcox, who has retired from conducting the pit orchestra for MU musicals after 27 years of service.

Professor Robison last taught at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, and has previously worked with several other productions (such as FIDDLER ON THE ROOF and SOUTH PACIFIC) as a voice coach. This is the second time she has conducted a pit orchestra.

Robison is on temporary assignment for one year as a voice instructor. However, if things go as planned, she should also be instructing an opera workshop next year. The opera workshop would be open to all

The NEA funds will be used to create and develop materials necessary for the project's success, and for the services of consultants in audience development techniques, who will help establish a specific plan of action.

A committee, made up of local individuals who have been actively involved in this series in the past, has already been reestablished and is working with the Clemens Center staff on many pre-project activities. They will become more involved as the project progresses.

students, but applicants would be required to audition.

Robison did not hesitate to discuss COMPANY. She said, "The music is great," and described the plot and dialogue as "clever." She also said the conclusion of the show proves to be baffling.

The musical director said the music is very difficult to perform, but that the pit orchestra was doing amazingly well with it.

Robison had nothing but praise to offer about fellow director Larry Knowles. She stated, "Larry Knowles is the most diplomatic director that I've ever worked with."

Knowles offered his own opinion about Robison. He said, "I think she is wonderful, and very workable." Knowles added, "She has done a wonderful job with the pit."

After she is finished working with COMPANY, Robison plans to start working on the opera MEDIUM, by Menotti. The opera is scheduled to be presented on April 24.

COMPANY will be presented on March 1, 2, and 3 at 8 PM and on Sunday, March 4 at 2 PM. Tickets are available at the Straughn Box Office at 662-4428.

Professor Putt Published

by Ann Marie Defino

Dr. Robert C. Putt, an Associate Professor in the Department of Education, has had his book, A BASIC GUIDE TO READING INSTRUCTION published by University Press of America.

The new book is illustrated by his daughter, Debra Payne, who is an elementary education major at Mansfield University.

Dr. Putt's publication is a new handbook on reading for students and classroom teachers who have not had special training in reading. The handbook is a practical guide for reading instruction at the elementary and secondary school levels.

The handbook also presents basic information on a variety of topics not usually found in books of reading.

Putt feels that the book will be helpful to anyone who has embarked upon his personal inquiry into the field of reading. In this sense, it is a beginning for the reader interested in learning about the basics of reading instruction.

The book is written in a straight-forward style so as to hold the interest of the reader. There are many special features included in this book, such as brief chapters with practical instructional suggestions, a field-tested self-instructional format, and pre-assessment and evaluation activities along with answer blanks and keys.

Also contained in the book are forms, suggested activities, charts on what to do with twenty common reading problems exhibited by children, and a detailed strategy on how to implement a diagnostic approach to reading instruction.

During his 17 years at Mansfield University, Dr. Putt has been a frequent contributor to professional journals in education.

His article "Implementing Selected Principles of Learning in Reading Instruction" was published in the recent edition of THE READING PROFESSOR. This journal is a publication forum for professors of Reading Teachers Educators, a special interest group of the Instructional Reading Association.

This 1984 publication is Dr. Putt's second. His book WORKING WITH THE STUDENT TEACHER was published in 1971. His latest book is being used in his course "Basic Reading Practices for Content Area and Special Teachers."

The book is available to students and teachers at the Mansfield University Bookstore.

The book, which is 212 pages in length, took about 3 years to complete.

Speaking about his new book, Dr. Putt stated: "I am pleased to have the book published and to be able to share my work with students in my new course in reading at Mansfield. I am also pleased that my daughter Deb has been able to have her illustrations published in a book that is being promoted on the national and international markets."

Daffodil Day

March 22, 23, and 24 are days Tioga County residents should remember. That's when Mother Nature will be helping the American Cancer Society, Wellsboro Unit, by providing thousands of yellow daffodils.

A corp of volunteers will be bringing this first spring flower, the flower of hope, to area residents as a major fund-raiser. This signifies the start of the local fund-raising crusade against cancer. Donations collected from the flower sale will be used for cancer research, education, and patient services.

Over 500,000 daffodils will be shipped from Washington as part of a special shipment for Daffodil Days in Pennsylvania. Tioga County will receive 14,000 flowers.

The volunteers will be taking donations at the following locations in the Mansfield area: First Citizen's National Bank, Commonwealth Bank and Trust, Honcell's Market, and Super Duper.

Individuals taking advance orders are Kathleen Andrews (662-2800), Jackie West (662-4121), and members of Lambda Chi Alpha and Delta Zeta.

Daffodils come in bunches of ten for a $3.00 donation and one for $.35.

Foreign Language Study

A Sound Investment in America's Future

Editor's Note: National Foreign Language Week is March 4-10. This article is being run in commemoration of this event.

Did you know that study of Foreign Languages...
...increases employment opportunities.
...helps you understand foreign culture.
...gives you a new perspective on your own culture.

For the United States it is important that...

...citizens be concerned with global issues and knowledge of their languages and cultures.
...the economy remain viable in an increasingly competitive international market in which knowledge of other languages and cultures is vital.

...government officials possess a knowledge of foreign languages and cultures in order to better deal with the increasingly complex international political situation.

You should know that...

...foreign languages are essential, or important, in over sixty occupations as a primary or ancillary skill.

...each of the major US companies routinely employs 500-5000 persons abroad.

...the State Department considers foreign language skills necessary for senior promotions.

...the Armed Forces are increasing language training for officers.

...the National Academy for Sciences considers knowledge of foreign languages vital for the US to remain competitive in technology, science, and trade.

...commercial language schools now have waiting lists, due to the increased demand in business and industry for persons with foreign language skills.

...the majority of Americans, according to a recent national survey, consider command of foreign languages a useful skill.

...the US government employs about 30,000 persons with a working knowledge of foreign languages.

...US airlines have difficulty in finding personnel with foreign language skills.

...foreign banks are opening branches in most major US cities (New York alone has close to 200) and need employees with foreign language skills.

...foreign countries are increasing investments in the US and opening new plants.

...856 radio stations in the US broadcast in 58 foreign languages.

...the media increasingly need reporters and journalists with a knowledge of foreign languages and cultures.

...twenty million foreign travelers annually spend more than eight billion dollars in the US and increasingly expect foreign language skills from Americans.

...knowledge of foreign languages will open up career possibilities in translating, interpreting and overseas teaching.

...close to half of the US multinational company executives know foreign languages.

...over a two-month period the New York Times carried 631 advertisements from employers seeking people with language skills.

...1,261 companies surveyed reported 60,687 positions requiring a second language.

...university and departmental requirements for foreign languages are on the increase since, in many fields, a working knowledge of foreign languages is important for research.

...business, industry and government often find it necessary to hire multilingual foreign nationals due to a shortage of linguistically trained Americans.

Don't be a "Tongue-tied American." You help yourself and your country by studying foreign languages and cultures.

In reply to the MU basketball fan who wrote in last week, let me say I did not make a "Big Time" mistake.

The column was written two days before the Bloomsburg game, because I have a deadline to meet.

At that time, it was reported to me that the bus going to the game was not filled.

I'm glad you pointed out that the bus was filled, but I must question you on whose fans were louder.

A very reliable source told me the Mountie fans were loud the whole game, but the Bloomsburg fans, who numbered close to 4,000 were a little louder. I must agree with my source because I cannot picture 100 fans out-yelling 4,000.

In closing let me say, I'm glad the Mountie basketball team finally received some support, but one night does not make up for the other 24 games, when Mountie fans were far and few between.

I can't believe the Montreal Expos traded Al Oliver, a .305 lifetime hitter, to the San Francisco Giants, so 43-year old Pete Rose can play every day. I really thought the Expos had a shot at winning the N.L. East flag, but I doubt it now...

Barring any upsets in the postseason play, the Atlantic Coast Conference should have at least five teams in the NCAA Basketball Tourny...

Wayne Gretzky had done it all, I thought. Last week, the Great One was behind the net with the puck, and he flipped it in the air over the net where it hit the goalie in the back and rolled into the net. Amazing...

Fred Lisso, a 6'3", 240 pound lineman from Texas and one of the most highly recruited football prospects in Texas, prefers to stay home and milk 104 cows a day because he's tired of classes and doesn't like big towns...

With the 1985 Super Bowl scheduled on the same day as the presidential inauguration, maybe they could swear the president in at halftime...

A source close to Notre Dame football says head Coach Jerry Faust better win big this year or else.

Coach of the Year

Mansfield Head Basketball Coach Ed Wilson, in his 17th and most successful season at the helm, has been named Pennsylvania Conference Coach of the Year. That announcement was made Wednesday by the conference office.

Wilson has guided the team to a school record 23 wins this year against just five losses and finished with a 10-4 Eastern Division record. His Mounties have been ranked nationally in NCAA Division II for most of the season and are now 10th.

The PSAC All Star team was also announced and while no Mounties were named to the East first team, three of five second team members were from Mansfield. In fact they are MU's three leading scorers. Named second team were senior Nelson Tuitt, a center from Jamaica, N.Y., sophomore Chris Venning, a guard from New York City, and junior Gerard Conners, a forward from Brooklyn. All three are averaging in double figures while Tuitt finished second in the PSAS in field goal percentage, hitting on 59 percent of his shots.

BASKETBALL

by Eric Keir

The Mounties shot only 31 percent from the floor in the first half, but used a stingy defense to down the Shippensburg Red Raiders, 66-54, in the opening round of the PSAC Play-offs.

MU's Craig Cooley and Shippensburg's Anthony Aborn both popped in 12 first half points as the Raiders held a 22-20 lead with 4:30 left in the Half.

Chris Venning sparked a Mountie rally with two buckets, to give the Mounties a 28-23 lead at intermission.

After cutting Mansfield to 31-29, the Shippensburg offense began to go cold, as they went four minutes without scoring.

MU took advantage of the Raider's cold spell, as Nelson Tuitt scored five points in 25 seconds to give the Mounties an 11 point lead, 40-29.

Shippensburg battled back to 46-39, but a jump shot by Jeff Singer and a dunk by Tuitt quickly put MU back up 50-39, with 5:30 remaining.

The Raiders could get no closer than nine the rest of the game, as the Mounties rolled to their 22nd win of the season against five losses.

Cooley finished the night with 18 points, while Gerard Conners and Tuitt popped in 14 points apiece, and Chris Venning chipped in with 13.

Tuitt also led all rebounders with 11.

The Mountie defense held Shippensburg's Parrish Perry, who was averaging 15 point a game, to four points.

Editorial

The Emotional Game

I figure most of the students on this campus are somewhere between the ages of 18 and 22. It wouldn't seem unreasonable to expect people between these ages to possess some degree of maturity. However, if the attitudes of several people I've met regarding relationships with the opposite sex is any indication, there are a few people around here who have a lot of growing up to do.

Men and women who are old enough and intelligent enough to go to college should be able to deal with relationships with some degree of maturity and responsibility. So why is it these people will enter into a relationship, leading the other person to believe they are sincere and serious, at least to some degree, and then, after having lead the person on for a couple of weeks, they start jumping from one person to another. Meanwhile, the other "innocent party" is left wondering what happened. It's enough to make a person cynical.

How can people who act like that think of themselves as mature? These people are the ones who are going to end up being hurt in the long run.

I'm not saying that people should tie themselves down while they're in college. I think college should be a time to get to know many people. You can learn as much from people as you can from textbooks. But relationships should be handled with maturity and honesty. People who have enough integrity to maintain a friendship with the opposite sex without turning it into a meaningless, degrading emotional game are extremely hard to find. I'm not sure people like that can ever change, either.

This editorial probably won't make any difference, and that's a little frustrating. But I tried, anyway.

Mel

Letters

To the MU Professors:

Could you PLEASE call in your class cancellations AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE?

A WNTS announcement ten minutes before the class starts is of no use to people who have already left their radios in their warm, dry rooms. And how about the commuting students? Who wants to drive on treacherous roads to school only to find his/her classes cancelled? If at all possible, please let WNTS know of your changes at least an hour before the class starts, if not sooner.

We would all thank you.

To those professors who do call in plenty of time, thank you very much.

Some Students

Dear Editor,

Here are a few facts about our University bookstore. It now costs a student 25 cents to cash a check. Why? Even the Super Duper has the courtesy of cashing student checks free of charge. When I go somewhere to buy an item such as food, I will go downtown even if it is in the middle of the day. The 25 cent check charge is just another unreasonable burden on the students. It may not seem like much, but when one pays 15 or 20 cents to write the check in the first place, it adds up. It can't be helping their business much either. The only things I have bought from the Campus Bookstore were my books, and need I mention the price of them?

This brings me to my second point. Why can't a student return an unused, unmarked book to the bookstore at least up to the drop period. Currently, the period at which a student can return a book is a few weeks short of the drop period. I could understand if there was a problem with returning the book to the publisher, but many books are used from semester to semester and can be placed on the shelves again.

The hours of the bookstore are inconvenient also. I would be much nicer for the bookstore to be open until 5:00 PM like any other business. I would also suggest that they remain open one night per week until about 6:00 PM. Maybe, if enough people mention these suggestions, something will change.

Sincerely,

Scott L. Rose

College Attendance After High School

Percent of 1980 high school seniors enrolled in college, by student characteristics: United States, fall 1980

SOURCE: U.S. Department of Education, National Center for Education Statistics, survey of "High School and Beyond, First Follow-up"

To the Editor:

Through you I would like to thank the cleaning ladies in all of the dorms for their fine service to the residents.

I really think they do a top job (no pun intended) of keeping us mopped up. I know it has been especially hard since some of the stuff that has fallen on the ground has been black. This black stuff is tracked in non-stop for days (through no fault of the students).

I don't think it's hard to figure out who is responsible for the black stuff. Must be maintenance feels the need to make work for others when they can't find something for themselves to do. Is the Safety Committee aware of the condition of the outside steps after recent snowstorms? Let me tell you that if I fall on improperly de-iced steps and am injured, something's going to hit the fan.

I see the maintenance people cruising around (and around, and around, and around) daily. Does anyone know why? First security does it and now this. Who's next? The cafeteria staff?

They (the cafeteria staff) do a good job too. Few people realize how hard it is to serve mass quantities of food to people who come in in large numbers at different times over a three and a half hour time span. I've heard about other colleges' foods, and in comparison, ours is pretty descent.

Registration on the day of the event will be between the hours of 10 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. Each skier will have a check-in time and a check-out time; each person should ski for no more than four hours, to get the total number of runs down the slopes. Participants will be given a special ticket to show the number of runs they make, when they turn in the yellow copy of their sponsor form at registration. Oregon Hill is providing free lift tickets for all participants, but registrants must show a minimum total pledge of $10.00 in order to register.

Prizes will be awarded to the top three fund raisers. To be eligible for prizes, all pledges must be collected and turned in at the American Heart Association Office by the close of the day March 15, 1984.

Pledge forms may be picked up at the following locations: 1. American Heart Association Office, 912 W. 4th Street, Williamsport; 2. Country Ski Shop, Broad Street, Montoursville; 3. Oregon Hill Ski Resort, Morris; and 4. WILQ Radio /WLYC, 353 Pine Street, Williamsport. Pre-registration is encouraged.

The Scholars in Education Award Program

The Scholars in Education Award Program is a special program created by PHEAA to encourage students with high scholastic qualifications in mathematics and the sciences to enter the teaching profession. It is intended to alleviate the shortage of highly qualified new teachers in these subject areas in Pennsylvania.

Your eligibility for a Scholars in Education Award (SEA) grant will be based on academic achievement in appropriate high school or college subjects, on class rank, on your scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT), and on other related criteria. Additional criteria are described in a brochure which is available in Retan Center (RC 111-Mr. Leslie Evans). The amount of the SEA grants varies depending on the tuition at the school, college, or university you attend. SEA grants range from a minimum of $1,500 to a maximum of 50 percent of annual tuition, which may be several thousand dollars.

If you are offered and accept an SEA grant you must sign a Teacher Commitment Agreement and a promissory note. The Agreement binds you to teach a year of mathematics or science in a Pennsylvania secondary school for each year you receive an SEA grant. If that commitment if unfulfilled, your obligation to repay the grant to PHEAA is cancelled. If your teaching commitment is not fulfilled, you are required to repay the award plus interest at the rate established by PHEAA.

In addition to scholastic criteria, you must be a resident of Pennsylvania and be attending or planning to attend as a full-time undergraduate student in one of the 76 Pennsylvania schools, colleges and universities that provide certified teacher training programs.

For further information, please contact Mr. Leslie Evans, Coordinator for Teacher Education, Retan Center 111.

Undeclared to Become Prepared

by Michael Nolfie

"The main objective of this program is to make it a little bit easier for a student who is undecided about selecting a major," Carmen Bianco, Assistant Director of Residence Life stated.

Bianco was referring to Major Night, a program for undeclared students. The program will be held Wednesday, March 21st from 8 to 9:30 p.m. in Laurel Lounge.

According to Bianco, the program is designed for both the undecided students and those who are considering changing their majors. Bianco estimates the number of undeclared students to be around 200.

The main emphasis of Major Night is on undeclared students, since students must declare a major by the time they have earned 57 credits.

Bianco initiated this program and then sought the aid of Janice Kennedy in the Advising Center. Kennedy is a Home Economics instructor and the foreign student adviser.

"I am trying to supplement what the Advising Center is doing—not take over its responsibilities," Bianco said.

Bianco describes Major Night as a non-threatening situation since students will not have to make an appointment with any faculty representative or sign any change-of-major forms. There will be no pressure on the student to join any particular department.

Pamphlets and other forms of literature about each of the majors will be available. Information about requirements of the major as well as what courses the student may transfer into another program will be supplied.

Every department will send faculty representatives to Major Night. Bianco said that all of the department chairpersons have been very supportive.

Bianco became interested in this program in a roundabout way. After receiving the grades of all the residents in Hemlock last fall, he held conferences

Mounties Win PSAC Championship

by Eric Keir

If you would have asked Head Basketball Coach Ed Wilson how good his Mounties were going to be at the beginning of the season, he probably would have shrugged his shoulders and said, I don't know.

Saturday afternoon, the Mounties answered that question as they knocked off regular season champion Bloomsburg to capture the PSAC Tournament championship, and earn an automatic berth in the NCAA Division II Play-Offs.

"It was a great, great win," stated Wilson.

The title was the first league championship for any MU men's team since 1974-75, when the basketball last captured the crown.

Down by three at intermission, 32-29, the Mounties took a 40-38 lead at the 14:25 mark of the second half as tournament MVP Nelson Tuitt connected on a three-point play.

Tuitt, who finished the night with 12 points and 13 rebounds, tapped in an offensive rebound and was fouled. He hit the free throw to give MU the lead for good.

All-Tournament selection Craig Cooley hit two jump shots to put the Mounties up by five, 47-42, with 10:01 left in the game.

Bloomsburg cut the lead to two, 49-47, but two consecutive baskets by Tuitt restored the Mounties five point lead.

With 4:45 showing on the clock, Barry Francisco and Glenn Noak hit back-to-back jump shots, to draw the Huskies to within one, 51-50, but MU's Chris Venning connected on a driving one-handed lay-up that put the Mounties up 53-50.

Senior Carl Walker scored on an offensive rebound and added four free throws in the final 30 seconds to nail down the Mounties 25th victory of the season against five defeats.

"Our two senior just played great. They knew this would be their last chance and they rose to the occasion," added Wilson.

Venning and Walker each scored 14 points for the Mounties and Cooley added 12.

Walker also pulled down 12 points.

The Mounties advanced to the championship, by downing Clarion 59-47 Friday night.

Venning and Tuitt led the way with 18 points apiece.

Walker and Tuitt hauled in 10 and nine caroms respectively.

COMPANY Reviewed

by Larry Biddleson

Stephen Sondheim's Broadway musical "Company" is classy, brassy, and dancey.

It was clear on opening night in Straughn Auditorium that "Company" had lost none of its original energy in the current Mansfield University production.

With help from choreographer Noel Schwartz and musical director Carol Jeanne Robison, director Lawrence J. Knowles with this unlikely uptown play performed for out-of-towners. Like many of the plays of Neil Simon and the films of Woody Allen, "Company" is written about and for Manhattanites. Yet, by way of W. F. Mellien's stylized set evoking the Big Apple and the cast's vibrancy and wit, we are willingly transported to the epicenter of glamor and disappointment.

As is the case with most musical comedies, the play somehow transcends hackneyed situations and inane dialogue. There is even a freshness about this version of the story of the aging bachelor reluctant to wed. Robert, age 35-going-on-60, is pictured by his married friends as "on the outside looking in" and "missing the real party." He is a member of the large "lonely crowd" inhabiting our cities. Clearly, people need people. And, according to lyricist Sondheim, three's company, not a crowd.

In the story, Robert, superbly portrayed by Tony Yadzinski, provides "company" for five more or less happily married couples. He proves to be as important to them as they are to him.

Each pair depicts an oddly workable arrangement of lives, no one of which is suited to Robert. The relationships are suffused with irony and paradox. Thrice-wed Joanne (Julie Gorda), cynical both in one-liners and song, is now married to wealthy Larry (Daron Davis). Amy (Tina Marie Hendricks) can't bring herself to marry doting Paul (Jeffrey S. Feltenberger) with whom she has been living for years.

Sarah (Parris Hall) and Harry (Jim Dixon) fuss at each other about eating too many sweets and drinking too much alcohol, but come together as one during a playful karate session. Susan (Gina Marie Scalzo), a transplanted Southern Belle, and Peter (William Squier) can continue to live together only by getting a divorce. Jenny (Susan Brenner) and David (Jeffrey S. Baer) — she a little slow, he a little fast — are bound together by mutual love and respect.

This is certainly not a one-man show, but Tony Yadzinski commands the most applause. With his lyrical baritone, he does more than "belt" out his tunes. He sings with gusto, but without sacrificing sensitivity of interpretation. In "Being Alive," he is at his very best.

In this opening night performance, the audience audibly appreciated the humor and pathos of the situations and the consistently strong acting, singing and dancing. I would even call some of the dance sequences inspired. In "Side by Side by Side," the big production number in the second act, Schwartz's dazzling choreography lifted the play off the city sidewalks and into the air.

There is no shortage of eye- and ear-appealing scenes. One is when the Andrews Sisters-like trio of Robert's girlfriends Marta (Gwen Walker), April (Melissa J. McHenry) and Kathy (Alisa J. Smith) perform "You Could Drive A Person Crazy."

Others are Marta's "Another Hundred People," Joanne's "The Ladies Who Lunch," Amy's "Getting Married Today" and the symbolic dance sequence "Tick-Tock," performed by Camille Pizii.

An incandescent New York City skyline looms throughout the show, symbolically asserting its power over the lives of the inhabitants. It is a visual reminder of the immensity of the problem of finding and keeping personal happiness in the center of all that activity.

Dear Nolfee

Dear Nolfee,

As I was in town on Saturday, celebrating the Mounties victory in Hershey, I ran into a higher official of the college. To protect his identity, I will just say he is an Assistant Dean of Residence Life (ADRL); I'll call him Roger. I don't know whether he was intoxicated or not, but he was constantly shouting, "They say we're great, ahhh, we're number one in the state." I would like to know if this is a common occurrence among college officials? Was he taking the advice of Joe Maresco that you printed two weeks ago in the FLASHLIGHT? Finally, Nolfee, what can we as students do to help this man?

Shocked & Outraged
P.S. Where was his brother that night?

Dear Shocked,

I'm afraid you are just going to have to get used to these obnoxious college officials. I must tell you that this kind of conduct has become a common occurrence among college officials, especially with the ADRL stuff.

What you may not realize is that I was at this particular affair. Of course, I was incognito (I must have been because every girl there refused to acknowledge my existence).

At any rate, I observed the actions of this high-ranking official on a first-hand basis. While I have no qualms with Roger's exuberance, I was appalled by his actions. Dear Nolfee found it particularly annoying when Roger pretended to imitate Nelson Tuit by slam dunking his beer. I also did not approve of Roger's musical tribute to the Culture Club entitled "The Best of Boy George." Although Roger's voice quality was excellent, his dress just didn't match the mood of the party.

I don't believe Roger was taking the advice of Joe Maresco. I'm led to this conclusion by the basic fact that at this party Roger yelled, "Who the hell does Maresco think he is—Dear Nolfee?"

Shocked, I'm glad you are concerned about this situation. I suggest you speak with Roger and inform him that people can have fun here at Mansfield without imbibing in alcoholic beverages. If he believes this, then no one can help him now.

I can answer your last questions by informing you that Roger's brother was probably busy that night. His brother (I'll call him Casper) is now a ghost-writer for the FLASHLIGHT. Casper handles all of our major sport stories, and usually takes on the bi-line of a very prominent staff writer.

Dear Nolfee,

I have this problem that is common to most men/women. I really have two problems with them, and I hope you can help me. I have tried to get help from outside people, but the only advice Joe Maresco gives is to get drunk and forget about life for awhile. My problem is that there is this goddess I want to meet, but I don't know how. My roommate tells me to just go up and talk to her, and my friends tell me to go for it. This advice is probably great for them, but I'm not a stud like Clarence Crisp and I can't do that. Please help me, Nolfee, she's driving me out of my mind.

My last problem has to do with groupies. I do something on campus that deals with talking to people on the phone. The last few weeks I have been hit on by wild women. That does not bother me, but when it happens, I can't think of anything to say to them. Some of the people's voices sound like foxes, and I really want to meet them. If you would, Nolfee, please give me some sure-fired lines that will get these women to my room where we could work on their proposals.

Sign me,
Lost, Confused, But Not Lonely
Dear Lost,

I really can sympathize with your first problem. Sadly enough, I, too, am not a stud like Clarence Crisp, and therefore lack the guts to ask this girl out. My roommate tells me to go for it—but I have yet to take his advice.

Therein lies our basic problem—WE are born-again cowards. We must muster the courage to meet our particular challenges. I suggest you talk to this goddess immediately, but try not to appear too interested. When talking to her, look at your shoes and say, "Hey, how about that Hart guy." This will also show her you are well-rounded in the area of politics.

I don't consider your second request a very serious problem. I'll be more than happy to give you some of my favorite pick-up lines: "You wench, I've got 15 minutes, want to MAKE MY DAY...?" "Hey, beautiful, want to see me do my John Holmes impression?"

Because you have sent such a nice letter, I've done a little extra work for you. I've asked some well-known authorities on the topic of women for extra help. Here are their favorite lines: Tom Young—"Well, uh, how would you like to go to a certain downtown establishment, and we can discuss whether chocolate eclairs exist or not...?" Dr. Carlson—"Hey, your really ugly. No, I'm just kidding. Ha, ha, ha..." Mike Lemasters—"Excuse me, Miss, but if you're REALLY nice to me, I'll introduce you to Joe Maresco...." Duve Fried—"Please go out with me, I've never had a date in my life. I'll give you $50 if you go out with me!"

Those are just a few of the approaches you can take. Please write again to tell me how you are making out. Good luck.

Pilot-Study Test

Mansfield University is one of only two universities in the country to be selected to do a pilot-study to test a new concept, Computerized Adaptive Testing (CAT) for placement testing.

MU was selected to do this pilot-study by the Educational Testing Service (ETS) and the College Board.

The study will be conducted on the MU campus beginning the week of April 9, 1984.

Volunteers from the current student body at MU are being sought to participate in this pilot-project.

Mason Receives Title

by Dan Mason

Last week, Mr. Richard Mason was unanimously elected to the status of Professor Emeritus.

Mr. Mason taught at MU for 22 years prior to his retirement last December. He taught a variety of subjects ranging from Astronomy and Astro-Physics to an English Science Fiction course.

Emeritus is an honorary title corresponding to that held last during active service, and is held after retirement.

Mason has remained quite active at MU since his retirement. He stated he will be spending March, April, and May "traveling in Europe, relaxing, writing a little, and retiring."

A Modest Proposal

by Michael Nolle

"There has never been an organization on campus that had all the other organizations coming in and coordinating everything. I think it's something that has been needed for awhile," Brent Green, president of Student Government Association stated.

Green was referring to his proposal for the Board of Organizational Activities, which he introduced at the second meeting of the campus need-assessment group on March 1.

The purpose of this organization is "to promote and organize student activities offered on the MU campus, and to effectively communicate them to all organizations and students."

The proposal was formulated by Green, Mark Geherin, and Steve Sunderlin.

Green stressed that the proposal he brought to the meeting concerning campus apathy was only a rough draft.

The proposal states that the Board of Organizational Activities (BOA) will consist of an appointed or elected representative of each of the following organizations; Student Government Association, WNTE, The FLASHLIGHT, Mansfield Activities Council, All Residence Hall Council, Inter Fraternity Council, Panhell, Black Student Union, a member of the music and/or theatre department, and possible someone from the athletic department.

The Executive Committee would consist of a representative from SGA, WNTE, and the FLASHLIGHT. These organizations were selected because they do not schedule activities and

To be eligible to volunteer, the student should have completed, within the last twelve months, the series of MU administered placement tests (Reading, English, and Mathematics).

If a student agrees to participate, he or she would be expected to: 1. answer computerized test questions in English and mathematics; 2. sign a statement granting permission for ETS to have access to your test scores, placement information, and certain academic records; and 3. if selected for an interview, following testing, discuss your reactions to and suggestions concerning the procedures and the testing with representatives of ETS and/or the College Board.

Pilot-project test results do not affect a student's Mansfield University placement test scores in any way.

Hafer states that students are assured that anonymity will be preserved in any public release of information.

In recognition of each participant's contribution to the project, the ETS/College Board will provide each participating student with an honorarium of ten ($10.00) dollars.

According to Mr. William Ward, of ETS, and Ms. Patricia Hendel, of the College Board, the ETS and the College Board are working together to develop the application of computerized adaptive testing to actual measurement situations.

The first application of this process involves developing a test of skills in college English and mathematics. The test will enable post-secondary institutions to ascertain whether students are prepared for college-level work or need preliminary remedial studies.

The test will consist of four independent modules—Reading Comprehension, Sentence Skills, Arithmetic, and Elementary Algebra.

Consistent with current emphasis in English and mathematics instruction, content specifications have been designed to emphasize question types that depend on reasoning and problem solving.

The first implementation of the testing system will be on the are therefore non-partisan.

The representative from SGA would serve as chairman, and one member would be elected from the entire group to serve as vice-chairman.

The group would meet a minimum of once a month. At this monthly meeting, the Board could plan out the following month's activity calendar. They would work to prevent an overlap of events.

Green plans on sending a copy of the proposal to every organization on campus with a letter explaining that members from BOA would be interested in attending their organizational meetings in order to generate interest.

"We don't want to exclude anyone," Green stated. He added that if any organization wants to send a representative to a BOA meeting, that person will have full voting rights.

The BOA will seek recognition from the Student Government Association. Green plans to submit a constitution to SGA in the near future. He wants to establish a foundation this semester. The BOA plans on holding one or two meetings this spring.

A second objective of this organization is to conduct workshops with the representatives in order to enhance their leadership, motivation, and parliamentary procedure skills.

Green and Geherin believe these workshops and seminars will keep the interest flowing in the BOA as well as offering a method to improve a good number of organizations.

Michael Lemasters, Director of Residence Life suggested that the BOA split its meetings in half. One half could serve as a scheduling session and the second half could consist of a mini-workshop.

The proposal calls for an advisor to serve on the Board. Green told the FLASHLIGHT that Lemasters would be a preferred choice since he has shown a great interest in the situation thus far.

Green said the committee is seeking direction. If anyone has any questions, useful information, or comments, they should contact Brent Green (662-9966), Mark Geherin (662-5733), or Steve Sunderlin (662-5656).

Regional Play-Offs

by Eric Keir

The Mansfield University men's basketball team will open NCAA Division II Eastern Regional Play-Off action Friday night at Gannon College in Erie, PA.

Mansfield, 25-5, and seeded number one, will play St. Augustine of North Carolina, whose season log stands at 19-8.

St. Augustine plays in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association and lost to the number one ranked team in Division II, Norfolk State, 68-64, in their conference tournament.

The Mansfield-St. Augustine winner will play the winner of the C.W. Post-Gannon game for the championship.

The Mounties downed Post 58-55 in the F.X. Matt Basketball Classic earlier in the season.

Baseball Team Heading South

by Eric Keir

The Mansfield University baseball team will make its annual trip to Sanford, Florida, March 10-25 for two weeks and play 14 games in the Florida Baseball Tournament.

Their first game will be played Sunday afternoon.

The team's home opener will be March 29, when they host Division III powerhouse Ithaca in a doubleheader.

Congrats to head basketball coach Ed Wilson on being named PSAC Coach of the Year. It's an award he deserves not only for the outstanding 25-win season but for the countless hours he puts into one of the most successful athletic programs at MU...

Three more Congrats go out to the PSAC Champions in Basketball, the 1983-84 Mansfield Mounties, PSAC Tournament MVP Nelson Tuitt, and All-Tournament selection Craig Cooley...

Oregon State's basketball and football teams have been charged by the NCAA with 54 rule violations that range from recruiting violations to players being payed...

Former BYU quarterback Jim Young has signed a 43-year, 40 million dollar contract with the Los Angeles Express of the USFL...

Now the USFL can sign players before their college eligibility is used up, they will probably start signing players out of high school. Why not? A bush league will do anything to be successful...

I wish they would elect Phil "The Scooter" Rizzuto to the baseball hall of fame, so I don't have to listen to him cry during Yankee telecasts and his broadcasts' partners always saying how he should be in the hall. Some day, Phil, some day...

Ed Wilson, head coach of the Mounties Basketball Team.

I Was In a Good Mood, So...

I decided I'd start Spring Break off on a positive note. I know I'm always grumbling about the lack of participation on campus, so this week I'd like to congratulate two organizations for their outstanding performances.

The first group is, of course, the Mountie Basketball Team. I have to admit, when it comes to sports, I'm pretty ignorant. Usually on Wednesday nights, while they're up in Decker Gym playing, I'm up here in the zoo working. Still, I appreciate the fine job they've been doing thus far. We have an athletic team we can be proud of, something that isn't exactly common to this campus. Congratulations, guys. I wish you good luck as you continue in competition.

The second group is the University Players theatre group. Since I've been a student here, I've attended several of their productions, and I can honestly say that I've never been disappointed by any of their performances. They put in more hours of work than I can imagine, and their performances are nothing short of exceptional. Where they find the time to rehearse between classes and studies is beyond me. I have the feeling that sleeping comes somewhere around number 25 on their list of things to do. I appreciate the effort they put forward, and I always look forward to each performance. They do an incredible amount of work so we can escape the madness of classes, studies, relationships, and everything else that drives us crazy on any ordinary day. Congratulations on your excellent performance in the most recent of these productions, COMAPANY. I thoroughly enjoyed it.

Have a good break everybody. If you have as many papers to write and books to read as I do, you'll work yourself into a frenzy. See you in a couple of weeks.

Mel

A REMINDER: The FLASHLIGHT will not be publishing issues for the weeks of March 15 and 22 due to Spring Break. Our next issue will be for the week of March 29.

Letters

The following letter is in response to a letter published in last week's issue. Ed.

Dear Clean and Well Fed:

I do agree with you that the custodial department does a fine job in keeping our buildings cleaned after a bad snow storm. I would like to inform you that the maintenance department does their VERY best at keeping the roads cleared and the steps cleaned off.

As far as the Safety Committee is concerned, we are only a small group of people, who are trying our best at getting things accomplished that might have been overlooked by someone else. Should you notice a safety hazard around the campus, please feel free to contact anyone on the Safety Committee and we will try to take care of it for you.

I personally am very proud of our custodial and maintenance staff. I think they do a FANTASTIC JOB!

Sincerely,

Jackie West, Secretary
Safety Committee

Dear Mel:

I would like to complain about lackadaisical method by which the mail is delivered on campus. It gets very annoying when you have to look in your mailbox three times a day to see if the mail is in or not. For many students the mail is the only contact with home that they have, so even a minor delay seems too long.

Another thing I would like to bring to your attention is the fact that we don't get mail on Saturday. Nothing is more discouraging than when you spend a weekend doing nothing because you don't have any money, only to get money in the mail on Monday which should have been delivered two days before. To some this may not seem to be a problem, but to others it's frustrating. Thank you for your time.

Give me my letters with those students experiencing academic problems. Many of the students expressed that they were unhappy with their major, and therefore could not get interested in their courses. Others said they were undeclared, and this uncertainty affected their academic performance.

Bianco is in charge of freshman programming. Last fall he coordinated a program with ROTC and also sponsored a seminar on taking essay tests. Major Night relates to Bianco's responsibilities as an ADRL.

"I hope this program demonstrates our concern for the student's academic and professional careers," Bianco said.

He added that the administration really does want to "Help You On Your Way," as the slogan in MU brochures asserts.

Since this program is a couple of weeks before freshmen and sophomores must pre-register for the fall semester, Bianco feels its timing is very appropriate.

Major Night is open to all students.

Record Review

by Ed Cera and Chris Graves

The Alan Parsons Project has been thrilling people around the world since the release of their first album TALES OF MYSTERY AND IMAGINATION. Through the years the Project has improved, added to, and elaborated with their extensive use of orchestration and chorus. Their use of major story themes helped to unify their albums into unique and cohesive works.

The group's last album, EYE IN THE SKY, proved to be quite popular. But now, Alan Parsons has released his seventh album entitled AMMONIA AVENUE. This album may prove to be an even bigger success that EYE IN THE SKY; perhaps the group's biggest.

AMMONIA AVENUE contains several songs of high calibre including "Prime Time," "Dancing On a High Wire," and "Since the Last Goodbye." There is also one instrumental, "Pipeline," which for the first time displays jazz elements in the Parson's repertoire.

"Since the Last Goodbye" contains lyrics of almost as much emotion as the Project's "Old and Wise." For example: "The years are moments passing by/ No time to wonder why/ You and I went the wrong way/ The days too short to fill with dreams/ Or question what it means/ Are a part of me now."

All the songs work to emphasize the album's central theme of the effects of technology on society and what awaits us at the end of the road.

The title track, "Ammonia Avenue," follows the Project's format for complex writing and memorable images. The lyrics, however, leave the listener speculating as to their meaning.

The album, unfortunately, also has its drawbacks. Alan Parsons has lost a lot of his innovations and willingness to try new techniques. The intellectual sound that once set them apart from other groups is missing. Songs such as "Don't Answer Me" and "Let Me Go Home" make Abba look like a Kiss concert. These tracks are nothing but bubble-gum rock made to sell. The Project seems to have turned too commercial in their attempt to sell the album. Let's hope they don't follow ELO into oblivion.

We rate AMMONIA AVENUE by the Alan Parsons Project a 6 1/2.

The latest video from Kim Carnes is for the song "You Make My Heart Beat Faster." The song is powerfully exciting but the video, though well filmed, does little to enhance it.

The video deals with an imaginary love affair with a race car driver. The song has the energy and vitality that Kim Carnes has lacked since "Bette Davis Eyes." We find that constant repetition of the song would be tolerable, but the video is so straight forward and unimaginative that it soon becomes tiresome.

We rate the video a 4 and the song an 8, giving "You Make My Heart Beat Faster" by Kim Carnes a 6.

—Pilot Study

IBM Personal Computer; conversions to several other popular micro computers will follow.

After the pilot-testing, decisions can be made by ETS/College Board as to when the test can be made available for general use.

The use of placement testing by colleges and universities is pervasive and is a recognition by the institutions of the problem of inadequate preparation of entering freshmen.

A response to a poll by 1,269 institutions of higher learning indicated that 97 percent of all institutions used various tests to assess the academic skills of entering students, primarily for the purpose of placement and course selection.

ETS and the College Board recognize the necessity for placement testing, and are attempting to utilize the technological revolutions in computers, together with test theory and statistical manipulations, in order to devise a computerized adaptive test.

Hafer feels that the students at Mansfield University who participate in this pilot-project are a major factor in that effort.

Hafer stated that those interested in participating in the project should contact the Placement Testing Office, Department of Special Programs, at the Learning Resource Center in Beecher House at 682-4436.

CJA Seminars; Courses

by Bill Greenly

Last month, the Criminal Justice Department held seminars to inform students and recruit new students into that field.

These seminars, coordinated by Dr. Floyd Liley, Jr. and Dr. Edward Ryan, featured special speakers who addressed several topics.

Mr. Jack F. Saylor, internship supervisor for the Miley Detective Agency spoke on Friday, Feb. 14 in the Planetarium.

Saylor spoke about current internship experiences with his agency which is located in the Philadelphia area.

He also interviewed criminal justice students interested in applying for a paid internship with Miley.

"Behavior Control in Corrections," "Burglary Prevention and Criminalistics," and "The CIA: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" were the topics of discussion on Saturday, Feb. 25 in the Planetarium.

"Behavior Control in Corrections" is a nationally designated television program listing of the National Criminal Justice Reference Service of the United States Dept. of Justice. It was taped with criminal justice students at MU.

A discussion of "Burglary Prevention and Criminalistics" was also conducted by Dr. Liley. Mr. John Buker, District Attorney's Investigator and adjunct instructor in criminal justice, and Mr. Robert Cox, criminal justice professor at MU.

The discussion on "The CIA: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow," was held with Mr. Jack Saylor, who is a retired CIA operations officer with twenty years of field experience.

According to Dr. Liley, all of the sessions were well-attended, and the department was very pleased with the results.

Dr. Liley also announced the installation of two new classes for the summer session at MU.

The Criminal Justice department will be offering a course in Correctional Institutions and Services during Session I of summer session.

According to Liley, this course is open to all, but it is recommended highly for people majoring in Psychology and other human services fields.

ARHC Takes A Gamble

by Melodie Doud

"We hope that this goes over well. It should be one of the biggest activities on campus," Mark Serva of Cedarcrest Dorm Council stated.

Serva was referring to Monte Carlo Night. "People will pay a $2 or $3 initial fee, and they will receive $2000 in play money," he explained.

After receiving the play money, players will be able to gamble at any of the various tables that will be set up.

Games will include blackjack, poker, wheel of fortune, craps, and roulette.

According to Serva, there will be no table limits; players can bet any amount.

Each dorm will be sponsoring a table and the Assistant Dean of Residence Life (ADRL) for each building will be running the tables.

Serva stated that signs will be posted to explain the rules, and the people running the tables will be able to answer any questions regarding rules.

"We hope to have some members of the faculty and administration running some tables," Serva said.

He also stated that the Mansfield Activities Council is providing a sound system. The theme will be the Gay 90's.

"Hopefully, some of the ADRL's will be dressed in costumes of that period while they are running the tables," Serva said.

At the end of the night, an auction will be conducted in which more than 250 prizes will be auctioned for the play money.

According to Serva, the prizes being auctioned include: a hot pot, a popcorn popper, albums, various pictures and posters for room walls, gift certificates from Pumpnickel's, McDonald's, and Bloss Beverage.

Most of the prizes were bought at discount from area merchants.

"McCrory's, Pumpnickel's, Bloss Beverage, Ames, Kentch's, Dunham's, and Radio Shack all helped us out," Serva said. "Food will also be available at low prices."

According to Serva, the All Residence Hall Council (ARHC) contacted the District Attorney, and he told them this activity is legal because no real money is involved in the games.

"Monte Carlo Night will be held April 17th at 8 p.m. We're not sure of the location right now," Serva stated. "Any profits realized will be donated to charity."

Serva suggested the idea for Monte Carlo Night to the Cedarcrest Dorm Council because they were looking for an activity.

According to Serva, Dave Newcomb took the idea to the ARHC, and they decided to sponsor the event.

"We hope to have a lot of people turn out for this. It's a lot of fun, and it's relatively inexpensive," Serva stated.

"It's also a good fund raiser and a good way for the students, faculty, and administration to get together."

Serva stressed that this event is open to all students, on or off campus.

"This isn't just a dorm activity," he said. "It's a campus activity."

Dear Nolfee

by Michael Nolfie

Dear Readers,

Before I get to the letters this week, I'd just like to announce that this is the next-to-last installment of this column.

I hope you've enjoyed the column to date. I also hope that no one took my advice or these questions too seriously. All of the material has been written for entertainment purposes only.

Ever since I started writing this column I've had to answer one recurring question: Do I make up the questions for Dear Nolfee? The answer is an unequivocal "No." They are all submitted to me for your approval.

Again, I'd just like to say that the main intent of this column has been humor—not malice. Believe it or not, I have a tremendous amount of respect for those I've maligned in this, and any past, "humor" column. I would never print anything about someone I knew couldn't handle it.

In reality, I really admire and respect those I joke about.

Ok, enough of the sermon already. Please send your letters for the last edition of Dear Nolfee next week. Thanks—NOLFEE.

Hey Nolfie,

I am writing this letter because of the trashy way you handled Uncle Adolph's first problem a few weeks ago. How dare you put the most bodacious girl on campus on the love lists of all the perverts you have running around over there?

I am extremely close to this young lady. Last semester I followed her to almost all of her classes. I almost got her name before the Thanksgiving vacation. I have to say that this fox has to be the best looking girl I've seen on campus in my three and one half years at glorious MU. My feelings of disgust toward you and the rest of those losers over there are as deep as they could possibly be.

I realize that with my off-campus duties I am not able to keep such a watchful eye on her, but my campus contacts are on the prowl. Let this be a warning to all of you! I will have no mercy on any of you! As you can see I am still within distance to make my feelings known. It would be wise for the 92.7 percent of you slobes to make like hockey players and get the puck out of there!

Just so you know, JM, I still wish I could be there to see you everyday, but things are tough all over. If you run into anymore problems, I want you to inform my contacts at Hamburger Heaven, better known as the Snack Bar. I will handle all problems that arise.

Well, Nolfie, The Doctor has spoken! Thanks for your time. I hope that all of you have as much fun there as I did.

The end could be near.
The Doctor

Dear Doctor,

I am getting awfully tired of responding to questions about "the most bodacious girl on campus." What the hell am I—her personal dating service?

Hopefully, this will be the last question I get about the most-watched female on campus. I've never even been formally introduced to her. And I'd like to go on record by saying I'm not included in the 92.7 percent of the slobes who admire her. Not that she isn't gorgeous. It's just that I fully devoted my life to worshipping that new t.v. sex goddess, Clara Peller. We're talking big fluffy buns here!

Still, I decided to print your letter because I found it amusing. And that could only mean one thing: You are a member of the MU Business department faculty.

I must confess I reached this conclusion with the help of the special investigation task force of the FLASHLIGHT—particularly Mr. Ed Bernstein. Ed always gets the scoop.

Now I won't embarrass you by printing your name. But I must warn you: give up all your wild fantasies about JM (You even had the gall to print her initials—you sicko).

It is a well-known fact that you have no chance with any women because you are a shallow, stupid, and lazy person.

No, I'm just kidding.

However, I seriously recommend you seek professional help because I've heard you give things away in your classes—a common sign of sexual frustration.

You need help. See a real doctor!

Dear Nolfie,

It seems obvious that most of today's students cannot write well. What is less clear, but equally important, is the remedy for the situation. It is in this vein that I propose the following. While the causes for this failure on the students' part are doubtless many, I feel the main cause for the decline is television.

Studies have shown that today's students spend an inordinate amount of time watching television. The result is they are unable to read, write, or think logically for sheer lack of practice. Nor are they able to write due to these deficiencies. Therefore, I propose that Mansfield University remove all television sets from the campus, including any the students themselves might own. The result of this action will be that students will spend more time doing what they came here for—learning. What do you think?

Signed,

I Want My Money's Worth
Dear Money's Worth,

This letters of your's really maid me madd. I think your points' rediculous. I wetch a normall amount of TV—14 hours a day. And I consider himself a perfuuctally fine reader and riter.

You and other people have a lot of kuerve. I could never gave up my favorit shows like—"The A Team," "Dukes of Hezzardd," "TV Fool-Ups and Practicum Jokes," "T.J.'s Hooker," and the USFL Football Games.

These shows really made me think. I learn more from Mr. T then I did from classes. That kind show teaches you about important things in life—like how to blow up helicopters.

Iuto, conclusion; I went to make it clear that if you try to take my t.v. away, I'll and lots of others will withdraw from this lousy place—than you-ell-be sorri.

Now what do you thluk, bozo?

Klein at MU

by Michael Nolfie

Robert Klein is a man of many talents—and he discovered most of them by accident.

Klein got his first taste of show business when he joined the college acting company while at Alfred University in New York.

After graduating with a BA in Political Science and History, Klein went on to Yale Drama School. He finished a year at Yale and completed summer stock before moving on to NYC to pursue his art.

Klein performed his stand-up act in Greenwich Village, and then he moved on to Chicago where he joined the famous improvisational company, "Second City."

The popular comedian fined tuned his skills in Chicago for one year. He then returned to New York and was on to bigger and better things, including a part in the Broadway musical "Apple Tree."

Klein got his big break while at the prestigious comedy club, "The Improvisation." He was signed by Rollins & Joffe, a top talent agency. Two more Broadway shows followed: "Morning, Noon and Night" and "New Faces of 1968." In 1970, he starred in "Comedy Tonight" was highly acclaimed for its originality.

Since that time he has appeared on and hosted many TV shows such as "The Johnny Carson Show," "Saturday Night Live," "Dick Cavett," "Merv Griffin" and "Late Night with David Letterman."

He has appeared in many movies including, "Hooper", "The Owl and the Pussycat", and "The Landlord".

Klein has received several Grammy Award nominations for his comedy albums: "Child of the Fifties" and "Mind Over Matter".

Recently Klein has achieved great success on cable television. He was the first performer on the Home Box Office "On Location" series and has done three one-man shows for HBO.

Klein demonstrated his versatility as a performer when he returned to Broadway to star in the hit musical, "They're Playing Our Song". He received a Tony nomination for his performance.

"The Robert Klein Radio Show", another unique venture, was an internationally syndicated comedy-rock show taped before a live audience with a guest list that ranged from the Doobie Brothers to Rodney Dangerfield which filled the airwaves for two years.

Klein is currently a regular on the NBC show, "TV Bloopers and Practical Jokes". He is also working on a screenplay for Warner Brothers.

Robert Klein, star of stage, television, movies, and radio will present a special one-night performance at Mansfield University. Klein will appear in Straughn Auditorium on April 12 at 8 p.m. The show is being sponsored by the Mansfield Activities Council. For ticket information, contact the MAC office at 662-4110.

Hemlock Plays Games

by Tim Cox

"It is hoped that this will be the beginning of a tradition," stated John Kerwin, Resident Assistant, in reference to the first Hemlock Olympic Games. "We will try to make it an ongoing thing."

The Hemlock Manor Resident Assistant staff, ADRL Bianco, and the Hemlock Hall Council have been planning the social sports and games event since Christmas break. "Most, hopefully all, of the residents of Hemlock will participate in at least one event," according to Kerwin, who is in charge of the softball competitions.

The RA's are primarily initiating participation, with each RA supervising a specific event.

The team sports to be played are softball, basketball, volleyball, flag football, and a relay road race. Each of the six floors comprises a team.

Events in which individuals will participate include Backgammon, Chess, and a Darts-Pool Biathlon.

The Hemlock Olympics will commence on Sunday, April 1st at 1:00 P.M. with the flag football games. Each day over the next week will encompass a new event.

The week of competition will wrap up on Sunday, April 8 with a cook-out for all Hemlock Manor residents and an awards ceremony for victors of both team and individual activities.

The overall highest winning floor team will receive money to be used toward a floor program, such as a pizza party. This floor will also receive recognition on an engraved plaque crediting this and future Hemlock Olympic winning floors. This plaque will be displayed in the ground floor lobby of Hemlock Manor.

RA Gary Strayer stated that "This is Hemlock's effort to combat apathy that runs so rampant on this campus."

"There has been a lot of talk around the dorm, and there seems to be a lot of enthusiasm," said Steve Sunderlin, continuing, "I'm looking forward to a very exciting week of events. It should be bigger than Sarejevo."

Wrestling Round-Up

by Eric Keir

In the eyes of head wrestling coach Hank Shaw, Freshman Bob Johnson has a bright future in wrestling.

Johnson, who finished the year with a 21-10 record, earned a first place finish in the Edinboro Tournament, a third place award at Ithaca and a second place finish in the NCAA Division II Eastern Regional Tournament. His second place finish in the NCAA tournament qualified him for the NCAA National Tournament, where he lost to the number one and third seeded wrestlers.

Unfortunately, the team didn't fair as well. Despite owning a 3-3 record early in the season, the Mounties could muster only one win in their next 10 matches, to end the season with a 4-12 record.

Coach Shaw attributes part of this to the fact that nine of the conference schools are considered Division I in wrestling, with three of them being ranked nationally in the Top 20.

However, Shaw feels the team could have a winning season every year, "if we could get the guys out that have a strong wrestling background."

Baseball Team in Florida

by Eric Keir

The Mansfield baseball team completed their two-week trip to Sanford, Florida with a 7-9 record and a third place finish in the Sanford Baseball Tournament.

However, the Mounties suffered two losses to key players. Centerfielder Randy Vargason will be lost for the remainder of the season due to a broken cheek bone.

Vargason was tracking down a fly ball when he collided with a brick center field wall.

Pitcher Wayne Webb will also be lost for the season, because of an injured arm.

I Treat My Dog Better

There are certain people on this campus who have an attitude that drives me crazy. No, I'm not talking about the students; I'm talking certain members of the administration who work in offices frequented by the students.

Why is it that when students walk into certain administrative offices on this campus, they are treated as less than people? I'm not going to come right out and name any specific people because, to be honest, I'm a coward. I have to spend a great deal of time on this campus, and I have no intention of putting myself on anyone's hit list. Most of the students know what offices I'm talking about anyway.

I have walked into these offices several times during the course of my college career to ask questions that were of some importance to me. As a habit, I tend to treat members of the administration and faculty with respect; I feel they deserve that from me because of their positions. However, after having asked a fairly simple question in a polite manner, I don't appreciate receiving a snobbish, venomous answer that is intended to make me feel like a nuisance and an idiot. If it weren't for the students, these administrators and their secretaries wouldn't have jobs.

I realize that these people are doubtlessly confronted by students who are not polite or civil to them, and those students deserve to be responded to in a cold, unconcerned way. However, when a student politely approaches one of these administrators (or their secretaries) and respectfully asks information, these people in authority should have the responsibility to answer in a civil voice. Usually, however, the students are made to feel as if they are taking up valuable time, asking ridiculous questions that are of no concern to them.

I don't appreciate being treated like a child who has been caught telling a lie. I don't enjoy being condescended to.

On the other hand, there are also several offices on campus that go out of their way to make the students feel welcome and appreciated. The Student Activities Office, The Career, Counseling and Placement Center, and Campus Security are just a few of the offices that have been of great assistance to me in the past.

The offices that seem to have no time for students or their needs are probably in the minority, but these offices seem to be some of the most essential to the students.

I'm not asking for a lot, just a smile, a civil tone, an attitude of wanting to help the students who help make your paycheck a reality, that's all. That's not too much to ask.

Dear Editor,

I would like to apologize to the members of the audience at the MAC Talent Show for my rude departure in the middle of the show. My exit was hasty, and I was not being careful to keep quiet. Probably, I am unaware of how many people I affected with my leaving. To those who I offended, I am sorry.

But with my apology, I also feel it is important to let you know why I left. To be honest, I could not take one more insulting, crude, derogatory "joke" toward the female sex. I had already sat through two acts of purely demeaning "humor," and my tolerance level had finally reached its peak.

After hearing three different "comedians" try desperately to make an audience (well over half full of women) laugh at how "loose" women are, what "dogs" we are, how we all have VD, no brains and like to be raped. (That WAS the gist of it all.) You can't blame me for getting a "little" upset. Is this really the stuff jokes are made on?

Needless to say, I was not the only one who was unamused and getting angry, either. Comments from all around me showed distaste with the "comedians." Could you hear the boos and hisses from the audience hoping you would improve? Could you feel the long, stony silences when the audience had given up all hope for your acts and were absent waiting for the REAL talent to come on stage?

I realize that a humorous stand-up act is difficult. Sometimes it is hard to get an audience to respond positively. But comedy is not one slap in the face after another. Comedy—even crude comedy—is an art form. It has to do with including your own life experiences in a way others can relate to it, mocking yourself along with others, building on funny ideas and incidents while maintaining a stage presence filled with pauses and lingering facial expressions. Comedy is not the monologuing of insults onto females, blacks and homosexuals in ten minute barrages.

After awhile, I felt like I was having sharp stones thrown at my head. Yes, I am a sensitive person. But I am not an OVER sensitive person. When I left that auditorium it was because, as a SELF RESPECTING HUMAN BEING, I could honestly bear no more of those thoughtless insults called "jokes."

Believe it or not, I do hope to see you on stage again. I am looking forward to being part of an audience that is pulling with you rather than against you. Just remember that comedy is tricky. And words can "hurt" even when their original intent was to "humor."

Letters

Dear Editor,

This is Marty Gassner again, but this time I am on the defensive. I'm sorry my reply took so long, but as you know, it's been a busy semester. Mr. Jeff R. Bridgeman took the responsibility to defend the authors of "Record Review" upon himself. I sincerely hope that the authors have a word with Mr. Bridgeman, as he did a fine job supporting my first letter in the Dec. 8, 1983 issue of the FLASHLIGHT. Mr. Bridgeman, after reading your letter I can understand your lack of reading comprehension, and therefore, I will break my first letter down into a structure which you can better understand.

First of all, I never disagreed with either of the authors' opinions of the Culture Club's album COLOR BY NUMBERS. I merely requested that they show an adequate basis for that opinion. In reference to your statement about the authors' position of not being salesmen, I strongly disagree. A reviewer's job is to point out the good (or bad) points of a work and to either encourage or discourage the sale of a work with the hopes of improving the general public's opinions and tastes. In referring to the PS in my first letter, I said: "this article, in no way, is intended to reflect any opinion of the album, as I have never heard it, but to prove the uselessness of the article as it gave me no incentive to listen to it." Now what I am saying in this statement is that the article didn't adequately entice my curiosity to listen to the album. I have no feelings, pro or con, to the Culture Club because I do not feel that I am familiar enough with their music to render any kind of opinion.

In closing, I would like to thank you for your response. I guess it was better than no response at all. Furthermore, I will try not to confuse you further; thus, I will exclude any PS from this letter.

Sincerely,

Martin T. Gassner

Dear Editor:

The situation in Nicaragua is extremely critical at this time. The Nicaraguan economy, which depends heavily on only a few agricultural exports, has been under increasing attack from CIA-backed counterrevolutionaries. Several hundred million dollars worth of damage has already resulted from attacks such as the one against the vital oil storage facilities at the port of Corinto last October.

Nicaragua needs a successful coffee harvest to be able to purchase basic food stuffs, medicines, spare parts for industry and transportation, and oil. Because of the urgent political and military situation, many Nicaraguans have been mobilized in the defense of their country and cannot participate in the December-February coffee harvest this year.

That is why I have chosen to respond to Nicaragua's call for international work brigades to ensure a successful coffee harvest this year.

In the United States, the National Network in Solidarity with the Nicaraguan People (NNSNP) is working to coordinate volunteer participation. US citizens have a particular role in this harvest because if it were not for our government's open attempts to overthrow the government of Nicaragua, the Nicaraguans would be free to develop their own political life and their own economy in peace.

By participating in the volunteer coffee harvest, I hope to show that as an American citizen, I stand with the people of Nicaragua in their moment of need and that I oppose the policies of the Reagan administration. I urge others to support and write to NNSNP for further information on how to help the people of Nicaragua and to make donations. Their address is: NNSNP, 2025 "I" Street NW, suite 402, Washington, DC 20006.

The time has come to give Central America back to its people.

Sincerely,

David L. Wiltsie

THE FLASHLIGHT

Volume 59, Issue 22

Mansfield University, Mansfield, PA

April 5, 1984

Strategic Planning

by Michael Nolfie

Interim President Rod Kelchner has officially received the Strategic Planning Report and has established a timetable for implementing the recommendations.

Kelchner received the report a little over a week ago. He told the FLASHLIGHT in a special interview on Tuesday, April 2 that he has not yet sent out the modified version of the draft which is now in its official form.

Kelchner had scheduled a meeting with the Strategic Planning Committee for Wednesday, April 3. The purpose of the meeting is to educate Kelchner.

He will send a copy of the modified report to each academic department, the Trustees, Student Government Association, FLASHLIGHT, WNTE, and the reserve desk in the library.

Kelchner will then hold three open meetings to discuss the report and listen to specific responses.

There will be two meetings in the day and one in the evening. Kelchner said he is considering Thursday, April 12, Monday, April 16, Tuesday, April 17, and Wednesday, April 18 as possible dates for the meetings about some of the committee's reasoning behind specific recommendations. Kelchner prepared a two-page list of questions for the committee.

Kelchner said that he believes his questions for the committee can be answered in the course of one or two meetings at the most.

The next step for the interim president is to distribute the report to the faculty, students and other MU personnel.

"As soon as I'm satisfied that I understand the committee's thinking, then I'm going to circulate this report," Kelchner said.

Kelchner will officially announce the dates and locations for the three meetings in a cover letter attached to the circulated report.

Everyone will be welcome to attend. Kelchner said he considers the meetings to be very important: "I want to feel comfortable that the University community has had an opportunity to respond to the report. I feel they should have their day in court. This is important to the University, and I don't believe that these decisions should be made in a vacuum."

Kelchner has devised a chart which lists all of the recommendations and the people who will be involved in implementing them. This three page chart makes it easier for Kelchner to decide which recommendations can be implemented immediately and which will take some time.

Some of the recommendations will be handled solely by Kelchner and could feasibly be implemented as soon as the open meetings are over. Other policies may take the better part of next year to implement.

"I think by May of 1985 the astute observer should be able to detect changes at Mansfield brought about by the report," Kelchner said.

Because the faculty has not yet seen the revised report Kelchner declined to comment on specific modifications.

However, Kelchner said that there have been some alterations in the recommendations about the academic core requirements and specific departments.

He also said there are modifications in the recommendations about combining certain departments.

The majority of the recommendations regarding athletics remain intact with one minor change: the recommendation regarding the combination of Athletic Director, Chairperson, and Intramural Director was modified slightly.

The recommendation about mid-term grades was altered. It now states "mid-term grades be mailed only to students receiving D's or F's and that other students receive their mid-term grades directly from their course instructor."

Kelchner stated the committee received 38 responses to the draft. They covered all areas of the report. The majority of the responses were from faculty members, but students, non-instructional people, an alumnus, and a parent also replied to the draft.

The committee received three individual student replies and two petitions from a group of students.

Kelchner believes that some of the responses caused the committee to modify the report. He said the responses as well as the open meetings will have some sort of influence on his decisions.

Mike Nolfie will take over as the new Flashlight editor on Thursday night.

Flashlight Elects New Board

by Ann Marie Defino

Amid a raging snowstorm, The Editorial Board of The Flashlight changed hands.

The elections for the editors of the campus newspaper were held on Thursday, March 29 before the regular staff meeting.

Due to the unavoidable absence of the departing Editor-in-chief, the elections were run by News Editor Ann Marie Defino.

The new members of the Editorial Board had several comments to make about their new appointments.

Mike Nolfie, editor, replied, "I'm very anxious to take control of The Flashlight because I have some new ideas about how to improve the paper."

"I intend to make the paper more controversial and to increase the size of the news reporting staff," Nolfie said.

Ann Marie Defino, news editor, remarked, "As returning News Editor of The Flashlight, I hope to be able to work well with both the new and returning members of the staff. I'm sure the paper will undergo many changes next semester—hopefully all for the good of the campus."

Jon Lightner simply replied, "Hi, Mom, I'm Layout Editor now!"

Denise Bess, returning advertising manager commented on her reappointment saying, "It's a dirty job, but someone has to do it."

Tim Cox, returning typing manager, stated, "No comment. I'm too busy typing."

Departing Editor-in-chief, Melodie Doud, said, "I'm very anxious to leave control of The Flashlight to Mike because I know he has some new ideas about how to improve the paper."

"It's been a good learning experience for me, especially as far as learning how to deal with other people," she said. "I'll miss the endless Wednesday nights, but not too much. I'll really miss the people that I've worked so closely with over the past months. They're terrific people, and I wish all of them luck."

The new faculty advisor will be Mr. Paul Brooks, who is a new professor in the English department this semester.

Brooks was a reporter for the Star Gazette before he joined the MU faculty. He will be taking over as faculty advisor, replacing Dr. Uffleman who will be on sabbatical.

Dear Nolfie

by Michael Nolfie
Dear Readers,

Well, as promised, this is my last DEAR NOLFEE column. Naturally, I've received thousands of requests to continue this column, but I must respectfully decline.

I'm moving on to bigger and better things. Yes, the most coveted of all FLASHLIGHT staff positions—CIRCULATION MANAGER. I must take my new job seriously; I hereby promise to deliver all papers on time.

Anyway for my last column, I thought I'd include a letter from the person most mentioned in this column. Yes, that beautiful redhead. I can't honestly verify it is from her. It may be fabricated by some creative genius like Gloria Vanderbilt, but for fun I'll assume it really is from "her."

THANKS, NOLFEE

Dear Nolfie,

Since this is your last column, I feel it is time that I speak out; after all, I have been the topic of 92.7 percent of your articles.

First of all, who is this so-called "Doctor?" He must be THE loser if he followed me to most of my classes last semester and did not even introduce himself! However, did you like the view, Doctor?

Next, since you are my personal dating service, I like some "hunk" on campus, and I want you to give me some information on this person. He is always on the go because I just can't seem to get a hold of him. I know he studies a lot because his hair is already falling out. He doesn't even go to parties, but his "brother" does. Can I get through to him by his "brother?"

Nolfie, please don't tell me I don't stand a chance or that he's too old (bald spots turn me on). I need him as much as I need your help.

JM

P.S. Rumor has it that he keeps a cat in his room, is this true?

PSS Who are the Table Watchers, anyway?

Dear JM,

It's about time you wrote. I've been meaning to talk to you at recent parties, but I can never get near you because Dean Maresco and his paramedic friends are too busy trying to perform mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on you.

I'm sorry you feel the "Doctor" is a loser. I really feel compassion for the guy. He was so excited after spying on you that he gave his life savings away in class.

JM, you are confused. I am not your personal dating service. I'm actually doing that job for Nancy Vankaren. Unfortunately, after eight years of trying, I'm still unable to get her a date. I guess $75 just isn't enough to offer a guy. Nobody's that desperate.

Anyway, the hunk you describe sounds familiar to me. However, I don't think he studies a lot. He's really into trivia. He spends most of his free time thinking up brilliant questions like "Who was the Cy Young Award named after?" I think he should call Tom Tlady for help.

I do know that he is a high-ranking college official. I'll call him "Dick." Everybody else does.

His hair might be falling out because a) he has no friends, b) Clarence Crisp once beat him up in a barroom brawl, c) Dean Maresco refuses to pay his salary in anything but Green Stamps, d) both a & b, e) all of the above, f) donuts don't exist.

Sorry, I got carried away. I thought I was taking Tom Young's logic test again.

Record Review

by Ed Cerny and Chris Graves

It all started with the Go-Gos. The concept of the New Wave female has been gaining more and more popularity ever since. Various artists have come and gone along with different styles and approaches, but they lacked a sense of versatility and the willingness to try out new ideas.

Now, the flood of New Wave music has reached the charts and leading the race is Cyndi Lauper's SHE'S SO UNUSUAL.

The first release from the album, "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun," has already rocketed up the charts, proving Cyndi's nationwide appeal. Her child-like voice, reminiscent of Connie Francis, is also capable of showing maturity and virtuosity.

If you have only heard "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun," then you're in for quite a surprise. Cyndi Lauper's lyric style on some of these tracks is nothing less than remarkable. She is able to completely change her style and projection to become deeply introspective.

Two tracks in particular, "Time After Time" and "All Through the Night" show off her ability to vocalize in a more contemporary vein. Through the sometimes touching lyrics, Cyndi weaves a melody full of emotional references: "Lying in my bed I hear the clock tick/ and think of you/ caught up in circles of confusion/ is nothing new./ Flashback-warm nights/ almost left behind/ suitcases of memories/ Time after time."

This emotional trend is short, however, for Cyndi quickly delves back into the "Have Fun" syndrome and does a fairly good job of imitating Betty Boop.

It's quite obvious that this girl is determined to have fun one way or another. We rate Cyndi Lauper's SHE'S SO UNUSUAL and outstanding 8½.

The most imaginative and creative video on the airwaves now is the Car's "You Might Think." This video uses state-of-the-art video optics and blue screening effects. The song deals with a man who harrasses a girl until she finally notices him. The video not only supports the song, but creates visual puns around the lyrics.

The lead singer appears in the most unusual places including the girl's lipstick tube, on a bar of soap with the rest of the band, and in her alarm clock. He literally "drives her crazy" with a car, running her over in her own bed. This song is typical of a solid Car's hit.

We rate this artistically superior video a 10, the song an 8, giving "You Might Think" a 9.

Phi Beta Lambda: Business Career Day

by Melodie Doud

Representatives from six major companies will be on the MU campus during Phi Beta Lambda's Business Career Day.

According to Chris Bellavia, president of Phi Beta Lambda, Coca Cola, Woolrich, Topps Co., Meryll Lynch, American Information Systems, and First Citizens National Bank will all be represented during the event.

In addition, Professor Abraham Ghods will be conducting a marketing seminar.

"Each representative will give a one half-hour presentation on his or her field of business," Bellavia said. "They will also be available to speak with students and faculty on an individual basis."

During the 10 a.m. meeting, the representatives will be speaking on the various career opportunities within their companies and what skills these jobs require.

At 12:30, the members of Phi Beta Lambda will attend a luncheon with these representatives. Members of the Business faculty and some of the administration, including President Kelchner, will also be attending.

Bellavia stated that this event has been planned since November and is scheduled for Wednesday, April 11, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in 204 Memorial Hall.

"Most of the businesses we contacted thought that MU is a teacher's college. The Business curriculum is one of the largest on campus, and we hope that this event will encourage companies to recruit and hire students from MU," Bellavia said.

"Phi Beta Lambda, with the help of advisor Abraham Ghods, originated the idea and organized this event," Bellavia stated.

"With help from the Business Department and President Kelchner, Phi Beta Lambda sent out about 60 or 70 letters to various companies," he said.

Money for Business Career Day was obtained through raffles, Valentine's Day flower sales, and a grant from the Mansfield Foundation.

"Prior to this Business Career Day, no companies have ever come to this campus for the purpose of recruiting," Bellavia stated.

"If it goes over well, next year we plan to expand it to include a few more companies. The ultimate goal for this event is to help improve the recruitment practices at Mansfield," he said.

Runners Attack Cardiac

by Tim Cox

"Looks like the guys are enthused. Even the spectators are excited. Looks like it will be a good time," stated Hemlock Resident Assistant Gary Strayer before the relay road race of the Spring 1984 Hemlock Olympic Games.

He continued, "It's a beautiful day in Northern PA—a beautiful day for a race." Indeed it was. Tuesday afternoon was about 50 degrees at 4:30 PM when the race started.

MU President Rod Kelchner, sans starter's pistol, officially started the relay race, the course of which was just under a mile. The 36 competitors struggled up Cardiac Hill from Hemlock Manor, turning onto Campus View Drive past Decker, Butler, and Grant Science Center, then taking the street climbing behind North Hall and Manser, returning to the front of Hemlock.

Each of the 36 speedy freshmen and the participating RAs ran one lap, relaying to the next team members in the usual relay race fashion. Six laps constituted completion of the race.

The first place team was the second floor south team, followed by the third floor north team in second place and the first floor north team in third place.

Joe Voorhis, a member of the second place team, remarked that "Cardiac was the roughest part of the relay," a comment that was reiterated by many, including RA Jerry Thomas, who added that it was "a pure nightmare."

Dean for Student Services Joseph Maresco sympathized with the racers when he said that he "got tired just watching it." He also indicated that he was impressed with the participation of this leg of the Spring 1984 Hemlock Olympic Games.

Ed Wilson

Basketball Coach

by Eric Keir

Even though his 26-6 Mounties grabbed most of the headlines, Head Basketball Coach Ed Wilson didn't go unnoticed.

Wilson was named PSAC Eastern Division Coach of the Year, as well as Coach of the Year for the entire PSAC.

Last week, the National Association of Basketball Coaches selected Wilson as Coach of the Year for the East Region. He was also one of eight candidates nominated for Division II coach-of-the-year.

Wilson, who came to Mansfield in 1967, has compiled a 265-167 record, which includes one NCAA Regional crown in 1975 and two ECAC Regional titles.

In 1970-71, Wilson's Mounties advanced to the NAIA finals, where they were stopped, 88-78, by Grambling.

This season, Wilson guided the Mounties to their first PSAC Conference title since 1975, a berth in the NCAA Division II East Regionals and a national ranking of 6th in the country.

Wilson began his coaching career at Brunswick High School in Ohio in 1958. He was named the Buckeye Conference Coach of the Year in 1963.

He then moved on to Trinity High School in Washington, PA, where, in 1966, he led them to a sectional title and earned another coach-of-the-year honor. The following year he came to Mansfield.

Basketball doesn't stop in March for Wilson. Besides recruiting, he runs the Mountie basketball camp in July.

I know I was wrong again, because I chose Kentucky to beat Georgetown in the semi-finals then beat Houston for the National Championship, but I didn't know Kentucky wasn't going to show up for the second half against Georgetown...

Houston's Akeem "the Dream" Olajuwon blames the Cougars' championship loss on his teammates and the officials.

The Dream called his teammates selfish, because they didn't give him the ball enough, and the officials called everything on him.

The NFL has banned all forms of taunting, including the "Sack Dance" performed by the Jets Mark Gastineau and the Redskins "Fun Bunch" jumping act in the end zone. My favorite rule change allows referees to send a player out for one play for not wearing his socks properly.

Former Mansfield baseball player Tom Brookens added two more positions to his collection when he started in right and center field for the Tigers during spring training...

Basketball Wrap-up

by Eric Keir

The 1983-84 basketball season was a "dream season" for Mansfield University. The team didn't win a national championship, but they left their mark on the Mansfield record books.

It was a team without any super stars, great height and one that left Head Coach Ed Wilson wondering how good they were at the beginning of the season. But Wilson, turned the unknowns into one of the nation's best teams.

When the final buzzer rang, the Mounties had compiled a 26-6 record, including a 10-4 PSAC Mark. The 26 wins shattered a school record for most wins in a season, eclipsing records of 20-1 in 1960-61 and 20-4 in 1964-65. The Mounties also earned its first PSAC tournament championship in ten years, plus a berth in the NCAA East Regionals. In the final NCAA Division II rankings the Mounties were ranked as the sixth best team in the country.

Mansfield opened their season by losing the championship game of their own TIP-OFF Tournament to Virginia State, and their conference opener five days later to Cheyney. But then the Mounties rolled to ten straight wins including a 56-55 victory over 10th rated C.W. Post in the title game of the F.X. Matt Classic in Syracuse. That win vaulted Mansfield into the national rankings for the first time all year.

The Mounties season ended with a 94-78 trouncing of host Gannon University for third place in the East Regional. Mansfield was upset in the opening round by St. Augustine's of North Carolina on a basket with eight seconds remaining, 68-65. St. Augustine's advanced to the NCAA Division II championship game, but were stopped, 81-77, by Central Missouri State.

Individual honors also rolled in for the Mounties. Chris Venning, Gerard Conyers and Nelson Tuitt were named to the PSAC Eastern Division second team. Tuitt and Craig Cooley were named to the All-Tournament conference Team, with Tuitt being named the Most Valuable Player. Venning earned a spot on the East Regional Tournament play.

Tuitt capped his collegiate career by being named first team district ALL-AMERICAN: His 955 career points ranks him tenth on the all-time scoring list at Mansfield. Tuitt also leaves as the best field goal shooter in the school's history. He set the record as a freshman (.548) broke it as a sophomore (.555) and again his junior year (.657).

"It was a very rewarding season," stated Wilson. "Everyone on the team accepted their rolls, and we came up with the big plays when we needed them."

The "Dream Season" is over, but it will be remembered for years to come by players, coaches and fans.

Editorial

Well, it's about time for my 14-month association with the FLASHLIGHT to come to a close. Fourteen months is not a long time to have worked here. Compared to the length of time served by some of the other members of this organization, I am a novice. However, I have learned a lot during my time spent here. I think, in some warped, masochistic way, I will even miss this place a little.

I would like to thank all those with whom I have had the privilege of working, especially during the past seven months. I want to give special thanks to AJ, Stephanie, Eric, Chris, Mike (who wrote 95 percent of several issues this semester—thanks, Mike!), and to Bob Bogart. Also, special thanks go to Dr. Uffelman, particularly for helping me over some of the rockier paths, and also to Mr. Brooks who, for some insane reason, has agreed to be the Faculty Advisor next year. Thanks, too, to the Pennysaver for printing the FLASHLIGHT every week, and to campus security for their help.

My duties as editor officially end Thursday night when Mike will step in and take over the position. I know he'll do an excellent job. Good luck, Mike. Better you than me!

For the past seven months, the FLASHLIGHT has been an integral part of my conscious and subconscious (or should I say unconscious?) being. I've heard past editors say that it's difficult to step back and readjust to normal life. I believe it. I won't miss the 28-hour Wednesdays, the anxiety attacks when the clock says 2 a.m. and the front page is still empty, or the shadowy Thursdays viewed through fuzzy eyeballs. I'm not sure whether there actually is a Thursday or if Wednesday runs until Friday.

I will miss the awful "jokes," Stephanie's weird music, and even my old nemesis, the Compugraph.

And those with whom I have worked, I have come to respect you as friends and colleagues. I'll miss you most of all. I wish you luck.

Goodbye,
Mel

Another Earnest Proposal

I was loitering around lower Manser the other day eavesdropping in the corners and secretly taking notes looking for just the right "catchy" slogan for a batch of bumper stickers I planned to make and sell for a buck each. I'm not a scheming person by nature. But the Registrar has demanded $15 for a diploma and a teaching certificate, and no one seemed interested in buying a chance on an incredible, all expense paid trip to Beirut. My bumper sticker plan seemed doomed to fail, too, as I couldn't seem to catch just the right phrase I needed from the student conversations I overheard. "There is nothing to do in Mansfield but party," seemed too wordy. "It's so boring here," wasn't quite catchy enough. And I wasn't sure that "This place sucks," would catch on.

Of course, these sentiments are nothing new, but I wondered how this student boredom is possible in Tioga County. You've all seen the college brochures. They show, in splendid color, a boy with a basket of strawberries, a man fly fishing in a rock bottom creek, people horseback riding, and children playing in a rubber raft on a stream. Inside the brochure there are promises of wonderful recreations. "In town—a movie theatre, skating rink" and "a large park with athletic fields and facilities...Within six miles an 18 hole golf course...hiking and bike trails...horseback riding, too." And "within easy driving—Pennsylvania Grand Canyon; Watkins Glen, home of the Grand Prix; The Finger Lakes; Oregon and Denton Hill ski slopes; Pine Creek's famous 'white water' trips..."

I know, the movie theatre hasn't shown one movie since it closed its doors years ago, but the other recreations listed do exist. I use them. I enjoy them.

Upon further reflection, I realized that students, most without any transportation, really find it difficult to even get a glimpse of Pine Creek. For most students, I imagine, these places only have reality in the brochure. Does this University have an obligation to provide access to what it advertises as "available recreation?" I thoughtfully abandoned my bumper sticker enterprise, for the moment, and considered the problem at hand.

What if the University would purchase a passenger van and offer excursions on the weekends? Non-traditional students, who have lived here all of their lives, would be the drivers and guides. Students could rent tents (the University already has these available) and catch the van ride to the Grand Canyon. After gazing over the Canyon rim to Pine Creek flowing 800 ft. below, they could hike to the bottom of the Turkey

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to a letter in last week's FLASHLIGHT from a Mr. David L. Wiltsie.

For the moment, I am going to leave my political background out of the picture. Mr. Wiltsie, your letter was about helping Nicaraguans to harvest their coffee. I wonder if you realize that Nicaragua is backed by Cuban, Soviet, and East Bloc military advisors?

I see no need for any US citizen to back your fund. I believe this for several reasons: one, Nicaragua is Communist; two, they are helping communism to spread; and three, if they need help, why don't they get it from their communist advisors? Do you see what's going to happen? If you and other people give money, that may be enough to keep the country going, which in turn will help the spread of communism even more. Do you want communism right on our back door? I certainly don't. Too many of my ancestors gave their lives for the freedoms that we so readily take for granted today.

Now I will bring my political views and background into the picture. I am a Republican, in Army ROTC, an Eagle Scout, Assistant Scoutmaster in two troops (one here in Mansfield and the other in my hometown), a registered voter in my hometown, and I also have many friends in the military. I would also like to emphasize that only in America can you do what I am doing. I am thoroughly sick of hearing about people like you and your causes. Sure you can say we should not be there messing up their lives. However, I say that if you want your freedoms, your children, their children, and so on down the line, to have their freedoms, we've got to stop Communism! The Russians and their allies OPENLY ADMIT THAT THEY PLAN TO AND WILL SPREAD COMMUNISM TO COVER THE EARTH! I feel that the people on this planet deserve better than that.

We've got to start someday because there won't be any second chances to regain what's lost as in World War Two. If this country had been smart, they would have let General Patton go all the way to Moscow in 1945.

Mr. Wiltsie, this isn't Vietnam in the Far East (although just as important), it is Central America! So I urge all US citizens not to help this organization because it only backs Communistic ideas. If people do give, the backing countries will only suck the money out of the country anyway. The money may also go to help buy weapons for their rebels.

Mr. Wiltsie, I encourage you to write back or get in touch with me because I'll be more than happy to discuss it. As my final statement I'd like to say that the Communists can have my freedoms and my land when they pry my gun from my cold, dead fingers!

Sincerely,
Scott E. Allen

Dear Editor:

Last September, in a football game here at Mansfield, Bloomsburg University sophomore running back Vernon Rochester sustained a serious injury to his body. For the past six months at Philadelphia's Magee Rehabilitation Center, Vernon fought to regain the use of his legs. He is now at home in New Jersey where he receives daily therapy in the continual struggle.

Although Vernon's condition remains serious, a steady progress has been reported. An electro-analysis of Vernon's legs indicates the possibility that movement will return. Constant treatment increases the chances.

As everyone is well aware, medical expenses are extremely high. Even with extensive insurance coverage, Vernon's bills are staggering. The Mansfield Football Team is asking the University community to assist in our effort to help alleviate some of the Rochester's medical expenses. On Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week (April 3—5), collection centers will be located in Manser Lobby, the Football Office (Decker Gym), and in each of the campus dormitories (at the front desks). Any amount of money that you can donate will be greatly appreciated. If you are unable to get to a collection center, you can send your contribution to John Delate, 402 Cedarcrest A.

May God bless you for your generosity.

Sincerely,
John J. Delate

The reason Dick doesn't go to parties is simple—no one ever invites him. His brother can't help you because they haven't spoken to each other in years. His brother has this annoying habit of yelling. "My brother Dick is a faggot." Never did really please him.

I won't tell you he's too old for you because I don't believe age should be a factor in a relationship. Hell, I'm having a great time with that sex goddess, Clara Peller. I did kind of get mad one time when we were intimate and she asked me "WHERE'S THE BEEF?" But I'm used to it by now.

If you really need him (and if bald spots turn you on), then I'll send word to him that you are interested. See, I'm a nice guy—no matter what my parents say.

I'm afraid to tell you this, but your main competition is his cat. I heard years ago they had quite the epic romance. Dick's cat has reportedly calmed down now—but I hear they are still very close. But if that's the kind of sitch you want to get involved with, GOOD LUCK.

I think I should warn you about the TABLE WATCHERS. They are a sitch group of young men. They watch your every move. But don't worry; they are strange, but harmless.

They get their thrills by imitating Phil Rizzuto, pretending to be the Kennedy family, and worst of all, singing strange songs about the Easter Bunny.

My advice to you is laugh at them. Everybody else does.

Trail and set up camp. After the toasted marshmallows are all eaten and the camp fire slowly fades to embers, the murmur of Pine Creek would rock them into a night of peaceful slumber.

Those students not interested in nature could catch the van on its trip to Corning and Elmira. I imagine that not many Mansfield students know that Corning Glass is the sole maker of Steuben Glass. You can watch workers hand blow the molten glass into delicate gifts often presented to royalty. After an afternoon spent leisurely touring the glass museum, students could catch a show at the Elmira Clemens Center where Bill Cosby recently appeared.

It is a shame that students come and go from Mansfield without any experience in how rich the area is in entertainment. If the college would make the effort to make the brochure recreations available, I could see alumni bringing their children back to their alma mater, and my finished bumper sticker would say, "MU—much more than mid-terms and Millers."

Changes in the Report

by Michael Nolle

Interim President Rod Kelchner has officially issued the Strategic Planning Report to the faculty, students, and all other Mansfield University personnel.

Kelchner has also scheduled three open meetings to enable faculty members, students, and staff to offer comments relative to the recommendations contained in the document. The meetings have been scheduled for April 12 at 3 pm, April 16 at 7 pm and April 17 at 1 pm. All of these meetings will be held in the North Dining area of Manser Cafeteria.

The meetings will be chaired by Kelchner. All members of the campus community are invited to attend any or all of the meetings.

The Strategic Planning Report is now in its official form. Several important and some minor alterations were made on the draft.

The FLASHLIGHT has received a copy of the report. The following is a comparison between the draft and the report which outlines the major changes as they appear in the report.

In the Core Area under Academics the report calls for the elimination of health as a core requirement and the reduction of required physical education courses from 3 to 2 as soon as transitional arrangements can be made. The draft had the same recommendation but called for it to be implemented by September 1, 1984....

The report has excised the recommendation which suggested eliminating studio art and art history as majors. The report recommends holding art history as a major in abeyance pending possible staff retraining. It also suggests maintaining the staff at the present level....

Under group III (Mathematics), the report recommends evaluating the needs of the department of Mathematics as retirements occur. It has also removed the recommendation which called for the creation of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science.

The report has removed the previous recommendation which suggested creating the Department of Business and Information Processing as well as excising ing the proposal to remove Computer Science and Economics from the Business Department.

The changes in the report regarding athletics are on a minor scale. The recommendations about the combination of Athletic Director, Chairperson and Intramural Director into one position was modified slightly. It now excludes the Department Chairperson.

The report also adds one recommendation under athletics which states "Continue to support the athletic training certification program." The other original recommendations about the athletic program remain in the report in exactly the same form as in the draft.

Within graduate studies the report adds the following suggestion: allow the Department of Psychology until July 1, 1985, to develop a cost-effective program.

The report offers some changes under the heading of Student Services: assign a task force to assess the present system of academic advising... Monitor health services costs at the Guthrie Clinic insuring that the present health fee covers costs. (The recommendation in the draft said "explore the possibility of establishing a minimum student user fee for health services at the Guthrie Clinic")....

Another change under student services is an addition to the draft. It calls for stricter administrative controls to improve the quality of residence hall life by enforcing quiet hours, reducing vandalism, and tightening security.

One change which was announced in last week's FLASHLIGHT is under the heading of Institutional Support. The recommendation which refers to mid-term grades was altered. It now states "mid-term grades be mailed only to students receiving D's or F's and that other students receive their mid-term grades directly from their course instructors."

The changes listed above do not constitute a complete list. They are an overview of some of the more important alterations. The complete report contains many more changes, some of which are very minor.

Kelchner will begin to implement some of the recommendations as soon as he conducts the three open meetings.

ARHC Elects Board

by Ann Marie Defino

All Residence Hall Council (ARHC) has recently elected new officers for next year. Those elected are John D. Shafer, Chairman; John K. Wheeler, Vice-Chairman; Colleen A. Boguski, Treasurer; and Theresa A. Brady, Secretary. The new officers will officially take office on May 1, 1984.

Departing officers are Dwayne Harris, Chairman; Scott L. Rose, Secretary; and Robert Archibald, Treasurer.

Shafer, who is presently Vice-Chairman of ARHC, stated, "John Wheeler and I have some new ideas and we will reveal some of them at the May 1 meeting." He also stated he will be working on other ideas over the summer.

Wheeler, current President of Maple Hall Council stated, "As Vice-Chairman of All Residence Hall Council, I plan to revise the constitution and to look into the possibility of getting commercial washers and dryers." Other proposals will not be introduced until next semester so that more research can be done.

In a joint statement, Shafer and Wheeler said, "We hope the Hall Councils can get together to provide more activities for the students on joint ventures. We also hope to improve the communication among the individual residence halls, the officers of All Residence Hall Council and the advisors to the Hall Councils."

Boguski, current treasurer of Cedarcrest Hall Council, stated, "As the new treasurer, I will see that the books are kept in order and all creditors are paid timely."

Brady is currently treasurer of Laurel Manor Hall Council. She said, "Sue McMillian (President of Laurel Hall Council) and I are pleased with all the Hall Councils' involvements with activities this year and hope it will continue next year."

All Residence Hall Council is one of the largest organizations on campus and is funded through the washers and dryers in the residence halls. ARHC provides the movies available for viewing in the dormitories and also sponsors bloodmobiles, trips, and other activities.

Book Review

by Elisabeth Sekellick

For Martin Troyer, the protagonist of Edwin Moses' new novel ASTONISHMENT OF HEART, his fiftieth birthday does not qualify as a golden anniversary. As a professor of English at the University of Kansas, he would seem to have everything the American Dream says he needs for contentment—job security, a talented and loving wife, a son to assure his posterity—but this particular birthday seems to make Martin that not only is life passing, it is passing by.

As if that were not enough, Martin's mother dies, and on her deathbed reveals that sometime in the past she killed and buried a strange man who "put out his hand to her" in a field on the farm where Martin grew up. Her confession shatters the carefully constructed idea of his past that was the last security Martin had to cling to. Suddenly everything he had thought to be true of his past was not.

The midlife crises of a Midwestern English professor could very easily become the stuff of boredom. Fortunately, Dr. Moses has an excellent understanding of the ironies inherent in watching someone who has spent most of his life wrapped in a psychological cocoon forced to face the fact that his life's foundations were built on false ground, that his educated colleagues are shallow human beings, that he himself has lost faith in his goal, and that he has for thirty-odd years or more allowed life to happen to him without his really having taken an active part in it. Moses' narrative tone expresses wry humor, but does not belittle Martin's struggles, even when they are little more than self-indulgent melodrama. We are kept conscious of how much of ourselves exists in Martin Troyer, and are more than ready to cheer when Martin finally stops trying to hide in his "ivory tower" and like a somewhat rusty knight goes out to battle his personal dragons.

Prophet's People

BY MIKE NOLFE

"I wrote 'The Prophet's People' because I saw for the first time that the Gospel of John was written about real, living, breathing human beings," Donna Zeigler said.

Zeigler is the author of a collection of monologues and dialogues called "The Prophet's People". Zeigler is a 1983 graduate of Mansfield State College. She is working on this production as a master's thesis for Elmira College.

Arlyne Garrity, MU professor of Speech, Communication, and Theatre is producing and directing the show. The production will be held on Tuesday, April 17 and Wednesday, April 18 at 8 p.m. in the Caberet, Memorial Hall.

The plot of the story revolves around a group of reactions to the life of Jesus Christ. The central characters are those people who came into contact with Christ before He was crucified, and the effect He had on their lives.

The story is unique because it is not a traditional Biblical drama, but an engrossing character study instead. The characters include Nicodemus, the Merchants, the Pharisees, the beggar, the servant girl, Peter and Judas.

The actors are from all around the Twin Tiers: Reverend David Smith of Blossburg, as Nicodemus; Reverend Benjamin Nevin of Mansfield, and Thomas Wierbowski, a music teacher in Wellsboro, as the Merchants; Vern Lapps, MU Speech and Theatre Dept. Chairman and Noel Schwartz, MU Dance instructor as the Pharisees; MU student Nathan Ritchey as the beggar; Arlyne Garrity as the servant girl; Andrew Seubet of Mansfield, as Peter; Lawrence Knowles, MU professor of theatre as Judas.

The play is based upon the Gospel according to John, but the scenes are interpretations of Donna Zeigler. Garrity said she employed her own interpretation in the method of directing. For example, Garrity instructed the actors not to play directly to the audience because she felt the play would become too preachy.

Record Review

by Ed Cerny and Chris Graves

As new groups emerge, it sometimes becomes necessary for old groups to accommodate the times. Not everyone can do this and they soon become buried in their "old-fashioned" style.

One group that has made the transition successfully everytime is the Cars. They have been able to change with the listening preferences of their audience and have consistently come out on top.

Their fourth album to date, HEARTBEAT CITY, is proof of their survival rate. It is a definite party album. Their extensive use of synthesizer and syntho-pop techniques have catapulted them from their previous styles into new and unexplored territory.

Every track on this album is well-written. Songs such as "Hello Again", "Looking for Love", and the latest hit "You Might Think" are catchy and have the flash and pizzazz you would expect from a solid Cars' hit.

Although their musicality shines through, their lyrics, on the other hand, lack depth, forethought and originality in general.

album.

If this album goes as far as we think it will, then the pulse of HEARTBEAT CITY will be felt for a long time to come. We rate HEARTBEAT CITY by the Cars a 9.

This week's so-called "video" is for the song "99 Luftballons" by Nena. Now don't get us wrong; the song is fantastic and Nena isn't bad looking herself, but she and her band have the stage presence of the zombie rejects from "Thriller".

The keyboard player should give his lips back to Mick Jagger. If you enjoy outside concerts, then this one will be great. Just don't sit on a landmine or worse yet, a cowchip!

Frankly, we're surprised that the band members knew where the camera was due to the excessive thick blue smoke that just happened to match Nena's Covergirl eye shadow.

All in all, the video is just plain bad. In the immortal words of John Candy and Joe Flauterhy, "may the good Lord take a likin' to ya and blow ya up real soon!"

We give the song a 9, the video a 2, giving "99 Luftballons" by Nena a sad, but deserving, 5½.

Blood Mobile

by Dan Mason

Were they vampires? Mosquitoes, perhaps? Whoever they were, they arrived at Mansfield University with tables, racks, and various medical instruments, but they left with 200 pints of blood.

The Wilkes-Bare Chapter of the American Red Cross came to Mansfield with their bloodmobile which was set up in the south wing of Manser.

After signing in, donors were issued Red Cross donation cards and were registered by members of Phi Sigma Pi and Lambda Sigma, who sponsored the blood drive.

With registration through, each donor had a small sample of blood taken from his earlobe. This sample was tested for iron content. The body was subjected to such tests as temperature, pulse, and blood pressure.

Donors then proceeded to a table where a Red Cross nurse removed a pint of blood from their arms.

After the donors gave blood, members of Lambda Sigma and Phi Sigma Pi provided them with refreshments to help them regain their strength.

Tennis Team Rebounds

by Bob Kakareka

For the last five years the MU tennis team has had a monkey on their backs.

On Monday they ended that jinx as they beat St. John Fisher 5-4 to win their first match of the season against four defeats.

Mansfield started slowly as their number one and two seeded players, Chris Davis and Tom Dodson, were defeated.

However, MU won the next four matches, as Hank Zarzycki, Bill Tacchi, Bob Kakareka, and Sandy Sanders all posted victories.

The doubles action started the same for the Mounties as they dropped the first two matches, before the team of Kakareka and Sanders scored the final Mountie points.

Coach Art DeGenaro was pleased with the Mounties' triumph because it was over a team that has consistently beat Mansfield. It also ended a four-match losing skid.

The team travels to Susquehanna University on Thursday and Lock Haven Saturday before playing their only home match of the year on April 18th against Kings College at 3:00 on the upper tennis courts.

Who's On Third

by Eric Keir

"Who's on third?" was a familiar question around the Detroit Tigers' spring training camp this season.

The Tigers looked at six different players at third base before deciding to give the job to incumbent and former Mansfield standout Tom Brookens.

Manager Sparky Anderson said Brookens can do too many things not to be in the lineup, including stealing bases. Anderson said there is not a better all-around third baseman on the team.

Brookens was used mostly in the outfield during spring training before being moved back to third.

The Tigers moved him to a backup because his batting average has dropped each year from a high of .275 in 1980 to .214 last year.

Brookens said he changed his hitting a few years ago and concentrated on hitting the ball up the middle. But this year he's not concentrating on anything except hitting the ball like he used to.

Mounties Sweep Bloomsburg

by Eric Keir

The Mansfield University baseball team improved their PSAC East Division record to 4-0 as they swept a double-header from Bloomsburg on Sunday.

The Mounties, 10-9 on the season, swept West Chester last week.

MU 1, Bloomsburg 0

Derek McNab held Bloomsburg to five singles, and didn't allow a runner past second base to lead the Mounties in the opening game.

Mansfield scored the games only run in the seventh inning as Roger Reigel, Steve Coakly and Rick Painter all banged out singles.

MU 8, Bloomsburg 7

In the nightcap, the Mounties rallied for an eight-inning victory.

Chris Curren tied the score with an RBI-double and scored the winning run on Jeff Evens single with two outs in the eighth inning.

Mansfield scored three runs in the fifth inning as Curren singled home Painter who had doubled, and Eric Smith drilled a two-run single.

In the sixth, the Mounties scored twice on a walk, a double by Coakly, and Painter's two-run single.

Now that another baseball season is upon us, I have decided to devote my weekly column of sports knowledge to baseball, with a few predictions, and yes, a few knocks.

I see that World Champion Baltimore Orioles are off to a flying start. They're 0-4.

How about those New York Mets? At press time, they were 5-1 with a five game winning streak. Hold it Met fans, don't run out and buy your World Series tickets because the Amazing Mets will be back at home in the cellar by the All-Star break.

How long will Yogi last as the Yankee skipper? If he can keep the Bronx Bombers in the thick of the race until the All-Star break he'll last the season, if not, bye-bye and George will name Roy White as the new manager.

What would a baseball season be without a player admitting to a drug problem? Pittsburgh's Rod Scurry is the first one so far this season, and I'm sure not the last.

My picks for this season are: In the American League I like the Tigers in the East and White Sox in the West. The National League will be the Expos in the East and Dodgers in the West. The Tigers and Dodgers will play in the Fall Classic, with the Tigers winning it in seven games.

If I'm wrong at least I won't hear about it until next year. But so far this year I'm perfect in my predictions. I'm 0-5.

PLAY BALL!

Morris Named Player of Week

Minnesota Twins outfielder Mickey Hatcher, who hit .429 in the first five games of the season, was second in the voting. Also considered were pitcher Bruce Hurst of Boston, Milwaukee's Jim Gantner and Seattle's Jack Perconte, both infielders.

Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers, who threw his first no-hitter last Saturday against the White Sox, has been named the first American League Player of the Week of this season.

Morris was 2-0 with an 0.56 earned run average last week, striking out 16 batters in 16 innings.

Editorial

All semester I've been forced to examine the problem of campus apathy. It's been something I have been concerned with for some time now. No, I don't intend to go into a long-winded sermon about how the students, faculty, or other MU personnel don't really support such things as sporting events, MAC productions, or the activities sponsored by the dorms. That would be worthless because the situation is quite complex, and it cannot be solved in one editorial.

Therefore, I'd rather concentrate on what the people at the University can accomplish if they really want to. A topical example, the Strategic Planning Report, quickly comes to mind.

Near the beginning of the semester the University released a rough draft of the report for public perusal. The report did not initially stir up much controversy among the students. This upsets me greatly. Here is a report which will literally shape the direction of Mansfield for at least the next ten years. Doesn't anybody care what the administration does.

Some people obviously did and they made their feelings known. President Kelchner invited students, faculty, and other MU personnel to air their complaints, either in writing or verbally.

A number of faculty members sent responses to the Strategic Planning Committee regarding the initial draft.

However, of the 38 responses the committee received only 3-5 from students. Still, because of the efforts of these students (and faculty) changes were made in the report. The Art Department was a major victory as the committee altered the report in their favor.

I believe the changes in the report were made because the committee received an enormous amount of negative feedback from the members of the art department.

Other recommendations were altered including a ridiculous proposal about saving paper by doing away with mid-term grades. The new report also does not mention increasing the health fee for using Guthrie Clinic, but instead suggests monitoring the services to insure that the present health fee covers cost.

Why were these changes made? My guess is that the responses pointed out the negative factors of these particular recommendations. In other words, somebody spoke up for their rights.

But the report is not yet fully etched in stone. Next Wed. President Kelchner will hold two open meetings to hear comments about the report. They will be held Monday at 7pm and Tuesday at 1pm in the North Dining room in Manser (Kelchner has scheduled three meetings, but the first one was held earlier today).

Some of the things the report may change include the sports program, the core requirements, the library structure, and the computer systems.

Kelchner has publically welcomed everyone included in the Mansfield community to attend these meetings. So What's Stopping You? Afraid to stand up for your rights? After all, we the students are paying the salaries around here so we should have a chance to voice our opinion (It's an old argument but an effective one).

A copy of the report is on reserve at the library. If you don't make an effort now you'll have no one to blame but yourself when changes are made that upset you.

This is your time to take action. A number of people have already done this and it is evident because of the improvements found in the official report.

If you don't really care, then I think you're wasting your money at this school. Why not transfer to a school where they don't give you a chance to react?

M.J. Nolfc

I would like to state that any connection between initials used in the DEAR NOLFEE column and any real person on the Mansfield University campus is purely coincidental. I apologize to any persons who have been incorrectly identified with fictitious characters devised for humorous purposes only.

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to say that I thoroughly enjoyed the jazz performances in Steadman Theatre last Friday evening. The performing five-piece band, the MU Jazz Band and the high school jazz band deserve much praise.

I thought the high schoolers did exceptionally well and I was glad that MU gave them the opportunity to show us their talents. That is, I was glad until I discovered that the high schoolers hosted on my floor in my dorm were less respectful of my RIGHTS as a resident than I was of their PRIVILEGES as guests.

I personally promote the arts and I think it is great that MU encourages their development. However, I do not think it's great that the University provided housing to this VERY obnoxious group. These kids were going strong at three o'clock in the morning. One of the other guys on my floor asked one of them to turn down his tape player. Instead of complying with the request, the geek had the nerve to turn up the volume. The RA had to step in and settle the problem.

That's pretty sad for a group of sophisticated musicians. I would hate to see the University discontinue these get-togethers because there are some students who know how to behave and are worth hosting. But I do wish that whoever is in charge of such programs would find alternative high school student housing in the future. I really don't think it is fair to impose them on the dorm residents.

Respectfully,
Tim Cox

Dear Editor,

We have a good compliment for Manser. Here is a typical morning at Manser. When we walk up the steps in the main line to get our tickets to paradise punched, Martha, the lady who punches the tickets, greets us happily by saying "Good Morning."

Upon going through the line, we are greeted also by the other two ladies who are dishing out the food but can't take it. After getting our food, we sit down and start to eat.

All of a sudden, Margret, the lady who fills the cereal and plays musical chairs, decides to clatter the bowls together and we yell at her. We all know she LOVES IT so we continue to do it constantly.

We are presently not aware of how Margret got her drivers license for the bowl cart she pushes around, but we are presently checking with Mansfield University Campus Security.

The fellow who changes the milk in the dispensers has consulted DR. KEN MEYER, of the Biology Department for his expertise in determining the homogenization, acidity, and bacterial level of the milk. Fortunately, to the good Doctor's evaluation, the milk was found fit to drink and is determined to be healthy.

As for Henry Wilk, the Food Service Manager, he is constantly running around looking through the Fruit Loop boxes trying to find the Tucan Sam message decoder to unscramble the messages written on the napkins to "YO HENRY!"

If anyone has a problem with Manser, here is the proper procedure to follow.

- 1) Stand up from your table.
- 2) Do not throw any food.
- 3) Start yelling as loud as you can, "YO HENRY!"

After number 3 is completed, one will more than likely see Henry emerge from his hibernation in the kitchen. Invite him to sit down with you and casually talk to him. If he does not want to talk, then do the opposite of number 2 in the above mentioned directions. GOOD LUCK!

Food for thought,

"The play is terribly engrossing. It isn't preachy, all the play does is ask questions: Why are they putting Him to death? Who was this man? How dare He tell us we can have a new kingdom?", Garrity said.

Prophet's people is basically an independent production, which has become a campus-community team effort. The entire set consists of two stools. There will be a limited amount of expenses for costumes and script reproduction.

Garrity believes the costumes are important because they help to give an image of the time period. "The modern day audience gets to see a slice of that era. Of course, they will have to use their imagination to get a more complete picture," Garrity said.

Gwen Sumner, MU Media technician, is the technical director. She has been in charge of programs and posters, publicity, and of course, working all technical aspects of the production. Sumner designed the lighting and she will be in charge of videotaping and recording the play.

"Gwen's been wonderful. She's been doing everything," Garrity said. The director added that Sumner's lighting design will help to create different moods of the production.

"Prophet's People" will last about 45 minutes to one hour. It is a continuous flow of monologues with music interwoven into the story.

Garrity hopes that people will attend the production because she feels the words and music are "brilliant," and that it offers an interesting change to the traditional Easter story. Prophet's People is free of charge.

The format will include one-half hour of questions by Larry Miller, Chairman of the Department of Sociology, Social Work, and Criminal Justice Administration. These questions will be directed at the speakers.

Questions will be asked about their salaries, confidentiality, burn-out, and especially how well they feel they were prepared for their jobs by the University's Social Work program. After this, they will divide into small groups so that students can ask questions.

This program is sponsored by the Social Work Club so that students can get first-hand information from people who graduated from this program.

Miller believes the program will be beneficial to all those who attend. He said, "they will be better able to understand what to expect when they get out in the field. This is an excellent opportunity for undeclared majors to find out about the field."

this book is the women. With the exception of Lisa, the girl who eventually marries Martin's son, the female population seems to be either painfully neurotic, or almost terrifyingly monolithic. Martin's wife, Barbara, a successful artist, while she is apparently loving, also seems overly aloof at the times when she might have most naturally expressed that love. Worse, she occasionally seems condescending just when Martin least needs it. There is a potential in the character that was left largely untouched, but of which we are given tantalizing hints. Martin's mother, the catalyst for the story, hangs over everything like some terrible Nemesis, as stern and unyielding as granite even on her deathbed. Yet we are asked to believe that this Earth Goddess inspired sincere love in her son AND his wife AND his son. She does not seem to have enough humanity to inspire more than awe and respect.

Still, ASTONISHMENT OF HEART is a very readable and definitely enjoyable book with a deep sense of the joy that lies in truly living; and Martin Troyer is a man we can all recognize. His final resolution to his conflicts is as much our triumph as his. In a time which seems to grow increasingly pessimistic and much of literature only aggravates the depression, it's nice to know there are still reasons to grin at the world and shout "L'chaim!"

Dear Editor,

Seventeen MU students and a campus minister played volleyball for ten hours on Saturday, March 31, to raise money to help curb hunger in our world. The players raised over $300 for CROP, the Community Hunger Appeal of Church World Service. The money is used for relief and development projects in more than 50 countries on five continents.

On behalf of those who will benefit from the money that was raised, I want to thank all the players and sponsors for their caring and generosity. Our contribution may be

by Michael Nolle

"I'd like to thank everyone who came through the blizzard to get here," joked Robert Klein.

Klein appeared on stage at Mansfield University in Straughn Auditorium on April 12. The comedian was visibly upset with the size of the audience. MAC officials estimated the crowd to be somewhere between 160 and 200 people.

Mark Lisney and his band (Chuck Isley, Ron Simasek, and Terry Selders) served as an opening act for Klein. They played several Elton John songs plus an original tune by Lisney.

Greg Hardy was the other opening act. He played several songs including "Here Comes the Sun." The crowd responded well to Hardy's informal style.

Klein was greeted with a warm reception. He began by mocking the lighting and sound systems as well as the size of the crowd. He proceeded to go into a long segment about commercials.

Klein seemed to keep the crowd amused; however, some comic bits did not work well. Overall, the audience seemed to enjoy the show.

He excelled at employing movement to get laughs. His comic facial expressions were also very effective.

Klein spent the last twenty minutes of the one-hour show singing funny songs. He was accompanied by musician Robert Stein. He did six amusing numbers, which the crowd appeared to appreciate. However, his music did not work as well as the material on Tom Carvel, Budweiser commercials, or Slim Whitman.

The following is an excerpt from an interview with Robert Klein:

Flashlight: You did not start out in life wanting to be a comedian. You started Alfred University with the intent of becoming a doctor. When did you change your mind and start thinking about show business?

Klein: Possibly the second day in school. I was pre-med a record time. No, it took awhile. I had always idolized doctors. I realized into my second semester that really wasn't my pursuit. It was parent-pleasing, self-pleasing, but it wasn't really what I wanted to do. I loved history a lot. I eventually went into that starting my sophomore year. But it was still outlandish to think of majoring in comedy because you couldn't.

WNT: When you decided to become a comedian...

Klein: No comment. That's far too controversial.

WNT: When you decided you wanted to become a comedian, where did you go?

Klein: First of all, I learned a lot of things in college. The college experience was very valuable to me because two drama professors at Alfred talked to my father about me going to the Yale School of Drama instead of law school. That was the first step. Then, there were some very bad months in early '63. I was a substitute teacher for a while which gave me a lot of material, but gave me an average of fifty bucks a week. I had an apartment of my own. I participated in this little theatrical comedy revue in New Haven. It was a comedy show in a nightclub with four or five actors and actresses. A guy from William Morris agency saw me and invited me to audition for "Second City" from Chicago which was coming to town. I auditioned with Fred Willard. We met that day. He was Jerry Hubbard on the "America Tonight" show. He's a very funny guy. And that was really my start. "Second City" was the most valuable thing that ever happened to me. Everynight I did improvisation plus set pieces.

Flashlight: Who did you work with at "Second City" in Chicago?

Klein: Fred Willard, David Steinberg, Joan Basse, who is a repertory actress. She never really went into comedy.

Flashlight: After that, did you return to New York to work at the "Improvisation?"

Klein: Well, I went into a Broadway show called "Apple Tree." Mike Nichols directed it. Alan Alda, Larry Blyden, and Barbara Harris were the leads. And there were five boys and five girls, and I was one of the five boys. Big musical. It was a success. Then, I began taking a tape recorder down the street to the "Improvisation," which is a club on 44th Street. I began working out there every night right after the Broadway show. I met Rodney Dangerfield there who helped me a lot. I learned basic things like you need lights and sound, what is the audience composed of, etc. I began to take off from

SGA Elections

Vince Carr and Dan Figura
by Tim Cox

The Student Government Association now has a new president and a new vice president. Last week's elections put Vince Carr into the presidency and Dan Figura into the vice president's seat.

SGA's new chief is a junior majoring in Psychology. Carr has been an SGA senator for the past two semesters and has participated in the Student Affairs Committee, the Committee of Finance, and the University Hearings Board.

His other activities include Psi Chi, the Psychology organization; Lambda Sigma in his sophomore year; and Lambda Chi Alpha, of which he is currently president.

Figura is also a junior who is majoring in Business Administration. He has had two previous semesters of SGA involvement as a senator and has been active in the Budget Committee, the Traffic and Safety Committee, and the University Hearings Board.

The new vice president is currently the treasurer of Lambda Chi Alpha and has served as a manager for the girls' volleyball team.

Both Carr and Figura emphasized the need to combat student apathy on campus and are eager to work with the newly-conceived Board of Organizational Activities to reduce apathy. Figura commented that only 15 percent of the campus population turned out to vote, an effective example of the apathy problem. He said that the SGA hopes to increase the number of candidates in future SGA elections.

Strategic Planning

by Mike Nolle

Interim President Rod Kelchner was pleased with the turnout at the three open meetings regarding the Strategic Planning Report.

He estimated that ten percent of the campus community turned out to demonstrate their interest in the University. The first two meetings lasted approximately 90 minutes and were attended by about 50 people. The third and final meeting was similar in length but the attendance was greatly increased. Over 200 people, many of them affiliated with the music department, attended the last meeting.

Other groups which were represented at the meetings include the art department, physical education department, and members of the financial aid, Affirmative Action, and library staffs.

Kelchner stated that the large turnout of the music department will influence him to some extent: "One can say that there. I was in some subsequent Broadway shows which didn't get anywhere, but I also started to work gigs as a comedian. I went with Rollins and Joffe, the managers of Woody Allen and Cavett. I'm not with them as of about six months ago. Jack Rollins was basically good with young comedians just starting out.

WNT: Who was the biggest influence on your career?

Klein: On my career, Rodney. He showed me so much, and we were very close for a long time. I went with him on a million gigs. On my work, I'd say Lenny Bruce and Jonathan Winters. Although, I'm proud to say that no one ever accuses me of being like anyone else.

Flashlight: Do you consider yourself a more "intellectual" comedian?

Klein: Obviously, I use intelligence more than most people use the language. I use polysyllabic words. I bring my education, my reading, and my practical knowledge to bear in what I do. I wouldn't say I did exactly a dumb show tonight in Mansfield. Obviously, I think I use my noggin more than any comedian I know working. The one I respect the most that's clearly the most talented and brilliant is Richard Pryor. He's from a pimps and ghetto and stuff. I'm from another place, and that place is also valid. No one speaks the language anymore. And profanity is great. I used some tonight, but it slid by like a lollipop. I don't think the Daughters of the American Revolution would have complained about the words I used tonight because I used them properly. It's part of the language. And if modern comedy can't use them, then you're in Mars. But I don't use it as a substitute for the rest of the language. As avant-garde, as hip as I might think I am, I get embarrassed by too much profanity—unless I'm alone with a very kinky woman.

WNT: Has your intellectual humor every caused you a problem with an audience? Maybe people didn't understand.

Klein: No, if they don't I'll change what I'm doing. It's not like anything goes. I'm a man with integrity and taste. I'll take my pants down, show my ass to the audience and try to get a laugh if I can. This won't happen because I've written so much material over the years. I did some stuff today that I haven't done in three years. I have so much material and a lot of technique over the years that I know what I'm doing.

Flashlight: Do you find that material about commercials goes over well on college campuses?

Klein: It goes over well everywhere where people are exposed to it; do you know what I mean? It's not like I say I'll do commercials. I just got on that track. And let me say something that I wanted to say at the outset. I want to say something, and I think it's for the benefit of the community and the campus. The turnout tonight was very disappointing, and as a point of fact, it's the smallest audience I can remember playing for in ages. That includes Salt Lake City on a Wednesday night and a lot of other places. I went to school not too far from here. I'm from New York; I'm an Easterner. When I took this job,

I never could have dreamed so few people would come. Now, mind you, I wasn't paid by the head, so I'm not doing this for my own self-interest. There were a number of things. First of all, I understand it didn't do too well either. There was a performance of a play tonight by the college players.... You shouldn't have two things at once. I arrived for the job—and I have to say this—there was inadequate lighting; there was almost no stage lighting available. The rider, which is quite simple with regard to sound and lights, was not followed. I came to a place with a beautiful auditorium, and the show almost couldn't have gone on. They had one broken spot light. Ok? Now, there's a thing about the planning of this which is in keeping with that, so it shouldn't be repeated. The college should get together and not program similar activities on the same night. It isn't fair. If this were the night of a basketball game, it isn't fair. If it were during finals, it's wrong to spend the money to bring someone like myself to perform. Why should I have to compete against the play? In a 365-day year or a 300-day college year, or whatever it is, how many times do you have a play or a Robert Klein coming in or the Beethoven String Quartet, or whatever it is? People talk about the apathy here, and this may well be true. What I basically suggest is you shouldn't bring someone like me here. You can damn well better believe I took the money for performing tonight. I did a good show. It was a wonderful audience, and I knew it would be. But in the future, you should not hire a Robert Klein to come in if that's not what people want, and they don't seem to want anything. I heard a lot of things have been tried. How about not concerts? How about a picnic? How about not charging them the student fee and letting them keep the money and do nothing? I think it is the duty of the campus to bring in cultural, performance, philosophical, intellectual, and other practical experiences. I think there is a merit, too, even if ten people show up to have some artist come, as long as too much money isn't spent, but it's debatable. I'd like to think the spirit of the school would want events, but if they consistently show they do not, it isn't right.

WNT: It doesn't matter though. Cheap Trick, Chicago, both rock groups, both different types of music, comedians—it doesn't really matter. They don't show. It's too bad.

Klein: Then they shouldn't come. They shouldn't have them. Doesn't anyone ever think when they spend the bread for that? They're paying for it.

Flashlight: How do you get up for the show when you have to perform for a really small, crowd?

Klein: It's a very simple thing; it's my job.

Flashlight: Some performers might not do a good job for such a small crowd.

Klein: Impossible. Maybe they sing and they go through their set. I have to stand there and get laughs, and you know I'm going to get them. That audience came to see me, and I'm going to do the show.

WNT: The people that are there are there to see Robert Klein, not just any comedian. That's got to lift you up a little bit.

Klein: It lifts me up a lot.

Flashlight: You're presently working on a bloopers show—

Klein: Yeah, what is it called this week? Biggest rated one though. Every other one is going to fall by the wayside. This is a huge.

Flashlight: What sort of segment do you do for that show?

Klein: They asked me to contribute a piece every week from New York. I value my time at home in New York as extremely valuable. I do an original piece every week which is about four and a half minutes long where I include people walking around New York. We also conceptualize a bit. I did movie stars homes in New York. I did the eleventh one yesterday, and next week we'll do the twelfth. I participate in the writing. The first five, I wrote entirely by myself. I have a couple of helpers now. We have several meetings, get together a script, shoot it, and then spend the day editing it. Then, I mail it in. And it's completely separate from the rest of the show. I have nothing against bloopers. I think they're funny when people make mistakes. It's not exactly the most stimulating television ever invented, but my part is great. I recommend it. It's Monday nights at 8 p.m. on NBC.

WNT: What about movies?

Klein: Well, I've been in about ten. I'd like to be in more. You got a good part?

WNT: Yeah, it's called "Apathy at Mansfield" starring Robert Klein.

Flashlight: You were in "Hooper." What kind of experience was that?

One Act Productions

by Ann Marie Defino

The Fundamentals of Directing class will present four one-act plays May 2-5. Each one-act will run approximately half an hour with an intermission between the second and third shows.

SUPPRESSED DESIRES, by Susan Glaspell, is being directed by Lance Benson. The assistant director is Laurie Bowen. In this play, Henrietta, played by Tina Marie Hendricks, has a fixation on psychoanalysis. Henrietta's fanaticism drives her husband Stephen, played by Billy Squier, and her sister Mabel, played by Sue Rockwell, to see a psychoanalyst themselves.

THE DUCK VARIATIONS by David Mamet is being directed by Vauna Bernstein with assistant director Mike Frill. This subtle comedy about two elderly men George S. Aronovitz, played by Jim Dixon, and Emil Vare, portrayed by Robert L. Schofield, who relate stories of life by giving analogies of ducks. These men come to the park to defeat loneliness. They don't realize they are lonely, but come to the park because they like the companionship.

Eugene Ionesco's THE BALD SOPRANO is being directed by Eric Bixby. His assistant director is Patti Hoffman. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be played by S. Michael Getz and Julianne Gorda. Mr. and Mrs.

Martin will be portrayed by Bill Noldy and Kay Horton. Andrea Chase portrays Mary and Daron Davis is the firechief. This most absurd play attempts to portray the total absurdity and tragedy of language which reduces four people into shouting non sequiturs and various vowels and syllables at each other in a vain attempt to be understood.

MR. BIGGS, by Ann Marie Barlow, is being directed by Marian Tomlinson. Her assistant director is Kathy Bletz. The plot revolves around two elderly sisters, Eloise, played by Meribeth Wetzel, and Mary, portrayed by Ann Marie Defino. Eloise wants to go on living life to the fullest but Mary holds her back. Mary had fallen in love with a roomer that the sisters had taken in. The roomer, Mr. Biggs, provides an ironic twist of fate at the end of the play.

Admission is $1.00.

Monte Carlo Night

by Steve Snaderlin

"I was pleased with the event. The entire evening was a success," said Mark Serva, Monte Carlo Night chairman. The event, which was sponsored jointly by All Residence Hall Council and Cedarcrest Hall Council transformed the North Dining Room of Manser into a Casino.

The games included Black Jack, Poker, Craps, Roulette, and the Big Wheel, which were conducted by members of the Residence Life staff, professors, and several students.

The players paid two dollars and received $2,000 in ARHC currency used to bet at the tables. There were no maximum bet limits, which paid off for some, but most found that it was not the best way to increase their winnings.

The money was used to place bets and to bid for prizes that were auctioned at the end of the night. The prizes include albums and small appliances. But the one prize everyone wanted was the Blossburg Beverage Gift Certificate for $25, for which several of the gamblers pooled their money to place the winning bid of $70,000.

One student commented, "I think everyone there had a great time." For those who missed it, don't worry. Monte Carlo Night may become an annual event at Mansfield.

numbers doesn't influence me; but I think one is misleading themselves if they believe that because obviously when you see 150 people who are supporting a single cause or set of causes you're bound to be influenced by that".

However, Kelchner said that he will try to balance the quality of arguments with the large numbers that came out in full force: "I know the music department, for example, is watching and they're interested, they're scrutinizing. I'm not going to forget that but I'll try very hard not to let that unduly influence the quality of what we're talking about".

Kelchner said some of the concerns of the music and art department will be addressed when the college must meet their budget between June and August.

Kelchner has laid out a timetable for the implementation of certain recommendations. "My goal is prior to commencement to make an announcement that would contain two or three or four parts of some things I think we should implement right away", Kelchner said.

Junior Wins Competition

by Ann Marie Defino

Mark Geherin, a junior business major here at Mansfield, recently took first place in the Pennsylvania State Championship Competition in Public Relations.

This state convention, which is held annually, was conducted in Harrisburg on April 6. Ten colleges and universities throughout Pennsylvania, such as Temple, Penn State, Pittsburg, Bloomsburg Universities and Marywood College.

Competition was held in every aspect of business such as secretarial, science, public relations, management, etc. Each event included an exam consisting of twenty questions, both short answer and objective. The exam was divided into halves, communication theory and practical applications.

The event was judged by score of the exam. Only two questions separated Geherin from the second and third place winners who were from Marywood and Bloomsburg respectively.

Geherin is the new president of Phi Beta Lambda, business manager of WNTS, and is a member of the executive board of the Board of Organizational Activities.

Crediting Cove Hoover, MU instructor, and public relations classes here, Geherin said, "I give Mr. Hoover a lot of the credit for my winning. When I was answering the questions, I was just putting down what I learned from him. Going into the event, I thought I had a good chance of placing, but after talking to other competitors who won, my confidence was shaken. At the awards banquet I was very surprised to win. It was a great honor to represent Mansfield University."

Thank You . . .

Each Thursday, I have led you through the in-and-outs, the victories and defeats of our Mountie athletic teams and have knocked a few professional teams and athletes in the process.

But now that my tenure as your source for sports is over for the year, I'd like to give a few thank yous and some apologies.

I realize some of the teams did not receive a lot of 'ink' and I apologize to them and anyone else I might have left out. Maybe it was my fault or maybe I did not receive any information on the event or achievement, but either way I am sorry if I omitted you.

Next year I hope to expand our sports coverage and add a reporter to my staff (Tom Tidey, I hope you read this), because one person can not cover everything.

I would like to thank all the coaches, athletes, as well as any other person who has made my job so enjoyable.

A special thanks to Dave Fried, Sports Information Director, for the stats he gave me each week, and Dr. Finley, Athletic Director.

A BIG thanks to the staff of THE FLASHLIGHT, who layed out the sports page without me, so I could stay home and work for another newspaper.

Eric Keir

Sports Editor of
THE FLASHLIGHT

Now that another year of athletics at MU is about to come to a close, I'd like to pay a small tribute to some of our athletes, as chosen by the sports staff of THE FLASHLIGHT. (Alias me.)

Male Athlete of the Year—Nelson Tuitt. Nelson capped his collegiate basketball career by being named first-team district All-American. His 955 career points ranks him tenth on the all-time MU scoring list. He leaves as the school's all-time leader in field goal percentage.

Female Athlete of the Year—Kim Daniels. One of the best, if not the best volleyball player in MU's history. She is the school's all-time leader in spike kills.

Team of the Year—The PSAC Champs, Mountie Basketball Team. The set a school record with 26 wins. Captured their first PSAC title in ten years and earned a berth in the NCAA Division II tournament. Finished sixth in the Final Division II Poll.

Coach of the Year—Head Basketball Coach Ed Wilson. Guided the Mounties to a 26-6 record. He was named PSAC COACH OF THE YEAR, PSAC EASTERN COACH OF THE YEAR and EAST REGION COACH OF THE YEAR.

Congratulations go out to all MU athletes and coaches and good luck next season.

Another Niekro Shutout

Unbeaten Yankee hurler Phil Niekro continues to handle American League hitters, but it isn't his knuckleball that's been doing it.

Niekro, 45, scattered eight hits Tuesday for his fourth victory as the New York Yankees shut out the Kansas City Royals 4-0.

The ex-Atlanta Brave struck out eight, walked one and allowed only one runner to reach third base. He has not allowed a run in his last 21 1/2 innings. It was his 272nd career victory and first complete game this season.

"I go with the knuckleball 85-90 percent of the time, but this year I've been going with three other pitches (fastball, slider, turnover screwball) to set up the knuckles," Niekro said.

It was Niekro's 44th career shutout and he used 124 pitches to get it.

Editorial

"People talk about the apathy here and this may well be true. What I basically suggest is you shouldn't bring someone like me here."

Those words should look very familiar. They are found in the interview with Robert Klein on the Fine Arts Page in this issue. Mr. Klein was visibly upset because less than 200 people turned out to see him.

My first reaction to Mr. Klein's statement is, "Who is he to tell us what to do?" However, after I reconsider his statement it becomes obvious that Klein has a very valid point.

Klein goes on to say that performers should not come to Mansfield if they can only draw small crowds. Klein states, "Doesn't anyone ever think when they spend the bread for that?"

In this case it appears as if there wasn't much thought put into this entire venture. But I don't want to insult my old friends at MAC too much because I originally supported the Klein concert. Obviously, I was quite wrong in my early projections that Klein would draw a crowd of 800-1,000 people.

But what went wrong? Well, Connie Terry, President of the Mansfield Activities Council, has listed a number of possible factors: a conflicting event in Wellsboro, a Mansfield High School production, a play at Mansfield University, and the fact that Robert Klein is not well known (at least in Mansfield).

All of these factors should have been considered before scheduling this concert. The fact that Klein is not very popular or well known in Mansfield is the biggest problem. A survey should have been done to measure Mr. Klein's popularity on campus. MAC should have also carefully checked the calendar in order to prevent conflicting events. I also think the overall timing of this event was bad.

Connie Terry has assured me that all these things will be taken care of next time. She has also said that MAC is planning on bringing another comedian to campus next fall for Homecoming. She mentioned Rodney Dangerfield and George Carlin as possibilities. Terry said that a survey is presently being worked out in order to determine the college's preference.

My main complaint is not with MAC but with the students. I don't think the students realize that approximately $6,000 of student funds (from the activity fee) were spent for Mr. Klein to do a 64-minute show for less than 200 people.

I would like to briefly educate those students who don't understand the activity fee. Students pay $52.50 each semester. That money is divided by about 40 campus organizations. THE FLASHLIGHT lists the allocations on page 7. Please note that these allocations are only proposed; they may be changed by the CCSI Board or President Kelchner. Chances are they will remain as they are.

The two organizations that receive the most money are Athletics and MAC. Athletics receive 30 percent of the entire amount, which is $204,750. Next year MAC will receive $35,000. THE FLASHLIGHT is next on the list with a $16,000 budget followed by WNTE at $12,000.

Both THE FLASHLIGHT and WNTE operate on fixed costs. That means, without that funding, they could not operate.

MAC is obviously another story. In theory, they schedule the things the students desire. They do not have any fixed costs.

Now my question is, "Doesn't anyone give a damn what happens to his (her) money?" If you don't like THE FLASHLIGHT I invite you to join us. We would be grateful for a larger staff. After all, it's a STUDENT newspaper. If you don't like it, come and change it.

The same holds true for the rest of the college organizations, including MAC. However, here the student's responsibility is a little different. If you don't want to join MAC, at least voice your opinions. Don't allow them (or any group) to waste $6,000 in one hour! It's too late to tell them you don't like Robert Klein. I think by now Mr. Klein realizes he's not very popular in Mansfield. But please speak up about their Homecoming plans. It's a sin to complain and not do anything about it. If Carlin or Dangerfield do not thrill you, then tell somebody soon.

Students' money should not be wasted. Don't talk to your friends about it. Call up the people in charge or better yet get involved.

Here's something to think about over the summer: Mansfield is only as apathetic as you make it.

Letters

To the Editor:

Two weeks ago, I submitted an article from Dr. William Goode concerning new music courses that have been approved by President Kelchner for non-music majors. These courses are listed in the Master Schedule, but as no course descriptions are given, Dr. Goode took it on himself to make a list. This list was two pages of double-spaced type and certainly was not "space" consuming. I stressed the importance of this article and gave my phone number if there were any questions.

Well, two weeks have gone by and the article has failed to appear in the FLASHLIGHT. Dr. Goode, as well as SEVERAL faculty members are simply appalled. But, this is not the first time that this 'oversight' has occurred. The newspaper has continually neglected to publicize or inform the students on anything that comes from the music department.

Frankly, I'm surprised to see a college newspaper that refuses to support the college it "supposedly" represents.

However, thanks to Dr. Goode's patience, you do have a reprieve. But only one!

PLEASE print the article on course descriptions! It's a simple request. Of course, after seeing such important articles such as "Dear Nolf," I'm beginning to wonder what you consider 'simple.'

Chris Graves

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, April 17, the ARHC held Monte Carlo night in North Manser Dining Hall. I'm happy to say we raised between $50 and $100 for Vernon Rochester, the injured football player. (The exact figure hasn't been totalled because of expenses.)

All who attended had a good time. This past week I had been worried about a poor showing, especially after the low attendance at the Robert Klein show. Surprisingly, the "apathy" disappeared on Tuesday night: the players and dealers dressed in costume, administrators and faculty ran tables, and ARHC actually made money. That night's magic proved that the infamous "Mansfield apathy" can be beaten!

I'd like to thank the following people: to Jill Berlin, Ron Puterbaugh, Dave Newcombe, Rhonda Pfleger, Emily Gohn, and Theresa Brauchler a special thank you. I'd also like to thank St. Mary's Catholic Church, Curt Maynard, and Marian Carson for the gambling equipment; McCrory's, Bloss Beverage, Radio Shack, Dunham's, Ames', Kentch's, Pumpernickels, McDonald's, Sears, and Henry Wilke for the prizes; all the administrators and faculty (Mr. Kelchner, Mr. Maresco, Mr. Vaughn, Dr. Serine, Mr. Fried, Ms. Van Kuren, Mr. Bianco, Mr. Newcombe, Mr. Stock, and Mr. LeMasters) and students who dealt and helped; and Mike Nolf for his auctioning and comic skills.

We have tentatively decided to make this an annual event. I hope next year goes as well as this year.

A final thank-you to all who played the tables—they made it work. See you next year!

Mark Serva
Monte Carlo Chairman

Dear Editor,

One day I decided that I wanted to find out how the men and women's track teams were doing since I had many friends on the teams. So I thought all I had to do was look through some sports sections of the FLASHLIGHT. I was wrong, because I couldn't find anything about track since their season began.

Later that week I was asked by wrestling coach Hank Shaw to write an article for him about the team (again there had been nothing in the FLASHLIGHT) since he had some individuals who had fared quite well. I did so and submitted the article to the FLASHLIGHT. When the next paper came out I was paging through and noticed a wrestling article; it was entitled "Wrestling Round-up". I wondered if I was going to be reading about wrestling or a rodeo event. I continued on and noticed the by-line, "by Eric Keir" (the FLASHLIGHT Sports Editor) and then started to read. I also noticed that, except for the opening line, it was copied practically word for word from parts of the article I submitted. Some items were omitted from my article and apparently were thought of as unimportant.

Now I thought that these items were more important than most of what was printed; what do you think?

I was starting to get a bit irked about the state of the FLASHLIGHT sports section, but the last incident really upset me.

I have played tennis for about ten years and also have been reading tennis articles for about the same amount of time. I felt that I know what a good tennis article is and what it isn't. I recently submitted an article to the FLASHLIGHT about the tennis team's first victory of the season (which I felt was quite a respectable article). When I opened the paper to read it, I was INFURIATED. First of all the title was supposed to be "Netters Gain Revenge" and instead was "Tennis Team Rebounds". What? Rebounds? We weren't talking about basketball; we were supposed to be talking tennis. After reading the article, it was obvious that the writer knew nothing about tennis, and it was nothing like the article I submitted except for two similarities.

Yet the article stated that the article was written by me. I did not write that tennis article (if you can call it that), and wish to have no association with that trash you called a tennis article. That article wasn't worth cleaning up chicken-excrement with.

I would also like to point out that in this past week's FLASHLIGHT, only 1/4 of the sports section was about MU sports (a piece of trash about tennis and something about baseball). Besides the picture and the Klein: It was a great experience. Burt Reynolds is fun to work with. I played the villan, and I worked on it for five or six weeks. It was a very big grossing film, and a lot of people saw it.

WNTE: What kind of crowd do you prefer?

Klein: Anyone who comes to see me, who pays to see me, I love. They're great right away. But I think there is a special terrific quality about college audiences—in a normal college. Even the one tonight. They were enthusiastic and right with me. And I did a lot of quick things on them. I did some improvising tonight. I did some interesting segways and some crazy things. I enjoyed it. I suppose the audience I like least is a banquet audience because they haven't chosen me. Just about any audience is good, but I love the lack of pretense in college concerts rather than the fancy nightclubs. And I don't like people drinking and eating when I'm working.

Flashlight: Do you write all of your own material?

Klein: Yes, every word of my own monologue. Obviously, I collaborated when I was on "Saturday Night Live," my specials, and on "Bloopers." I'm a creative loner when it comes to stand-up.

Flashlight: Has Johnny Carson helped your career a lot?

Klein: Well the show has. Johnny always has been very kind. I've worked hard to be good on the show. I go on each time, and I'm good. I hold my weight. I went on in January '68; it was my first network shot, and it's been very important to me. What you find from a "Bloopers," it's hard to imagine, but about seven times more people watch "Bloopers" than watch Carson. Every year of my career I'm more famous than the year before. So many people recognize me now.

Flashlight: Have either Letterman or Carson helped you on a personal level?

Klein: Letterman started years after I started. He was the kid in my office who went with my audience. Neither took me around like Rodney. Johnny was very supportive each time I was on his show, not to mention the importance of his show.

WNTE: What do you think of the new system with either Johnny or Joan Rivers?

Klein: I'm not so happy about that. I hosted it a dozen times or so. Look, they found out that's the heaviest ratings. When Johnny is away the show's a different show anyway. So they got the best ratings with her. She happens to be very talented. I think her stuff is vulgar, but people like it. I don't really bother with that.

Flashlight: Are you working on a movie screenplay right now?

Klein: I did. I wrote a screenplay for Warner Brothers, and it's in the holding pen for the moment. Listen, I want to tell you it's been a pleasure taking to you....

(very large) ad, the rest of the sports page was about professional baseball (not pro sports, just pro baseball). I feel that many intercollegiate sports have been neglected by the FLASHLIGHT, but then again I thought that even intramural playoffs were worth printing in the paper.

Now tell me Mr. Editor, am I wrong or has the latest Sports Editor been extremely unfair (that is, besides being incompetent)?

Respectfully
Bob Kakareka

Editor's Reply:

Mr. Kakareka, I do not believe the 'latest Sports Editor' has been either unfair or incompetent. Eric Keir has been working with a limited staff of ONE. Naturally, he accepts free lance articles from people like yourself and as Sports Editor it is his responsibility to edit copy.

The articles you submitted were not literary masterpieces and were therefore subject to change. I think you should understand that anything submitted to a newspaper is a candidate for editing.

For the record, I was the person who retitled your article and decided to give you the by-line. It was my belief that although your article had been edited the main content was still present. I also believed that you would prefer your name on it since you, and not Eric, wrote the original copy.

Finally, I must point out that your letter had to be edited for length. This is a recognized policy

Carr stated that improved communication between SGA and other organizations is also a goal, which might be accomplished via weekly newsletters and periodic visits to dorm council meetings. He also feels that more publicity would increase student awareness of SGA operations and activities, hoping this awareness will stimulate more involvement.

Carr won the office of president with 182 votes, exactly double the number gained by competing John Kerwin. Figura had a closer race, winning only 15 more votes than competing Tom Boyer's 126, at 141.

The following are the senator election results: Jim Weaver, 172 votes; Jeff Swingle, 158;

Don Faulstich, 155; Brett Wood, 148; Eric Schwartz; Milt Landes, 139; Greg Seidel, 138; Mike Schuler, 132; Brian Lenker, 126; Gene St. Goddard, 122; Fred Borda, 118; Rick Micheal, 116; Tom Madden, 115; Todd Robinson and Charles Griscavage, both 106; Gina Bowers and Karen Squire, both 103; and Jenifer Robinson, 101. All of the above senator candidates fill the 18 positions.

Other senator election results are as follows: Hank Zarzycki, 91; Charles Hall, 87; Steve Lescavage, 85; Bernard Meyer, 75; Laura Harris, 66; Don Surianni, 65; Kathy Stump, 57; Yvonne Stroman, 55; Mike Heil, 54; and Peter Amos, 42.
